NEW SERIES ON RUSSIA, CHINA

A series of articles on the Russia-China border dispute begins today.

The articles are by Harrison E. Salisbury, an assistant managing editor of the New York Times and a former Moscow correspondent for that newspaper.

The Russian-speaking journalist won the Pulitzer prize for international correspondence in 1955.

He recently filed a series of reports during a trip to North Vietnam.

Timeless Terror Of War Haunts Asian Interior

By HARRISON E. SALISBURY

In late spring — and spring comes very late in Mongolia — spirals of dust rise high above Kara Korum, darkening the sun at midday and casting over the great steppe of Genghis Khan a sickly, yellow light that seems an ominous portent of disaster.

Watching the scene, I could not escape the premonition that I was witnessing a kind of Wagnerian tragedy, a drama in which the fragile figure of man was being overwhelmed by forces set in motion by the human but mindless notion that he can improve the balance of nature by plowing the ageless grasslands.

This brooding sense of elements uncontrolled and uncontrollable overhangs the Asian heartland today — not only in Mongolia but in Siberia, Central Asia, the Maritime provinces, and, so far as can be judged from a distance, in the remote, forbidden regions of Inner Mongolia, Tibet, Manchuria, North China and along the ancient caravan routes of Sinkiang.

It is not the winds of the Gobi, however, that have touched off the syndrome of apprehension.

True, concern over the winds' rape of the soil was real enough to bring sharp worry lines to the broad brow of Premier Tsendenbal of Mongolia when I talked with him in May in his offices overlooking the great expanse of Sukhe Bator Square in Ulan Bator.

Tsendenbal is a solid, unflappable man who has headed his small country, wedged between Russia and China, for nearly 18 years.

He has confronted a good many crises. But the issue that now concerns him most is not the threat of a new dustbowl.

It is the urgent, overpowering question that dominates the whole Asian heartland today — the simple, ancient, terrible question: Will there be war?

War, that is, between Russia and China; war more savage than any hurricane; war that would set Asia aflame; war whose nuclear winds would poison the Gobi Desert, Manchurian plain and Siberian Taiga alike, turning a supercontinent if not the world into a hostile environment in which even primitive life might no longer be supported.

If the fears of the peoples of inner Asia seem too dramatic, remote or unreal to many in the West, the fault may lie with ourselves — with our distance from the Asian heartland and our deep and almost impermeable sense of unreality when confronted with the evidence of hostility between Russia and China, of massive preparations for war and of actual combat intermittently occurring along China's 4,500-mile frontier with Russia and her 2,500-mile border with Mongolia.

For the plain fact is, as I quickly found out when I managed to penetrate the security belt with which Russia and China now shield their frontiers, that preparations for war are already far advanced.

On the Soviet side, hundreds of thousands of troops have been brought into position or are stationed in holding areas adjacent to the region of probable operations against China.

Massive new air installations have been constructed across Siberia, and existing facilities have been radically expanded.

The build-up of Russian troops is turning Mongolia into an armed camp. The Russians have emplaced the most sophisticated weapons in the armory of contemporary warfare in forward positions both in Mongolia and along the Sino-Soviet frontiers.

It is becoming more and more difficult to

SEATO Heads Press U.S. To Maintain Asia Forces

Involvement Urged As Red Deterrent

Times News Services

BANGKOK, Thailand — United States President Richard Nixon came under strong pressure today to maintain U.S. military involvement in the Asian mainland.

Officials of the ailing Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and the Thai government in meetings here pressed for an explanation of the U.S. plan to reduce American military involvement in Asia.

Informed sources reported that Nixon, on the third leg of his five-nation Asian tour, was told the U.S. military presence must be shored up, not cut, to deter the Communists and prevent more Vietnams.

Thai Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman reported after the session that President Nixon has reaffirmed U.S. commitments to Thailand and pledged to supply it with equipment necessary to fight the Communists.

The pledge apparently came during a 2½-hour talk with Thai leaders on the future role of the U.S. in the defence and economic development of Thailand and other southeast Asian countries.

Thanat, who took part in the talks, told reporters both sides discussed how various countries in Asia, especially South Vietnam, could be helped to stand on their own feet and preserve their freedom.

Thanat said the talks were aimed at finding ways to bring peace to Vietnam, Laos and the rest of Southeast Asia.

He said they were held in a free and frank atmosphere. Thanat said troop withdrawals from South Vietnam and elsewhere were discussed and Nixon explained the reasons for U.S. policy. He said the question of U.S. troops in Thailand also was raised, but it was agreed not to take immediate action on this.

POSITION TENUOUS

He said both sides understood that the continued presence of 48,000 U.S. troops in Thailand depended on the situation in Southeast Asia.

Thanat explained that U.S. troops were in Thailand to put an early end to the war in Viet-

VIETNAM VISIT SET

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — President Nixon will make a brief visit to Vietnam from Bangkok Wednesday before flying on to New Delhi, U.S. Ambassador Kenneth B. Keating said today.

Asked at a news conference whether the president would visit Vietnam, Keating said: "My information is that this is true."

nam and their presence has no direct bearing on the defence of Thailand.

He said Nixon was told Thailand has the responsibility for preserving its independence and freedom with its own capabilities but hoped its friends such as the U.S. would help by giving material assistance.

The U.S. agreed to help in developing Thailand's remote areas to strengthen them in the fight against Communists, he said. He added that the question of diplomatic recognition of China and its admission to the United Nations was not discussed in the talks.

Earlier, informed sources said Nixon — here on the third leg of his five-country Asian tour — ran into strong opposition over his decision to reduce American involvement in Asia during the talks with Thanom and Jesus Vargas, secretary-general of the Southeast Asian Treaty Organization.

The sources said Nixon was told the U.S. military presence

Land Prices Scuttling Low-Cost Housing Plan

GUNNING
... prices too high

By ROGER STONEBANKS
A unique low-income housing scheme in Saanich has ground to a halt, far short of its objective.

It has become the victim of rapidly-rising real estate prices and a failure by officials to realize how high the cost of houses would rise.

Its concept was hailed by many — instead of grouping low-income people into a single project, which would become a ghetto, it sought to disperse the poor into different neighborhoods and into individual houses.

Initiated by Saanich municipality, approved by provincial and federal authorities which supplied the $700,000 capital, the scheme was to comprise 50 houses. And that meant an average of $14,000 per house.

FOUR HOUSES

In the last 16 months, only 13 houses have been purchased with two more soon to go into the scheme. Since last December, only four houses — including the latest two which were moved from other locations — have been added.

The problem is that $14,000 houses, in Saanich and on a sewer line, are so rare that they can be said to be non-existent.

Ald. Edith Gunning, chairman of the municipal housing committee and sparkplug of the scheme, said permission was not received to exceed the $14,000 limit for each house set by provincial authorities.

"It doesn't seem likely we will be able to buy anything for that price," she said. "They were not willing to pay much more per unit than they would have to pay for multiple housing."

CONSTRUCTION

She said when sewer lines are created by the municipality's sewerage expansion, it may be possible to build triplexes and quadruplexes.

Saanich has asked for an amendment to allow construction as well as acquisition of accommodation. It will be considered.

Saanich Tests Isolation Cell

By BOB MITCHELL

A time-out booth is a cubicle two feet wide, six feet long, about the height of a door, designed to isolate a problem child who proves uncontrollable for the teacher.

A motion to introduce one on an experimental basis in a class for emotionally disturbed children at McTavish Road Elementary divided the Saanich school board Monday, but was finally approved on an experimental basis and on condition it be redesigned to make it more suitable for isolating a child.

As recommended by Victoria psychiatrist Dr. Phillip New, the time-out booth would have a one-way glass, so that a child enclosed in the box could be observed by student teachers and child-care workers.

VICTORIAN METHODS

Trustee Zachary Hamilton said the booth was a return to Victorian methods of treating misbehaving children.

"If a child is suffering from claustrophobia, using a booth with a one-way glass is a retrogression."

"I don't care how you do it, this is like locking a kid in a cupboard."

Hamilton said the booth reminded him of the days when his grandmother used to lock him under the stairs when he was a bad child.

Board chairman Mrs. Ruby-May Parrott said the time-out booth is the best solution for preventing a problem child from disturbing a class.

"Even with children with mental problems this is more effective than talking. The teacher has to have some way of isolating a particular problem."

Mr. Parrott said the booth is not unlike the penalty box reserved for rambunctious hockey players.

If you break the rules, you spend some time in the box. Superintendent Robert Price said the time-out booth had been rejected by the Greater Victoria school board, who had reservations about isolating a child.

But he pointed out the idea has been applied successfully in the United States, and added he would like to see the booth made wider than two feet.

"I don't like the two by six — we can make it bigger, we can make it open at the top and we can put in lighting."

Russians, Tough Markets Blamed In Steveston Fish Plant Shutdown

By PAT DUFOUR

Russian dragnets, east coast subsidies and cheaper competition from Scandinavia and the Far East were blamed today for the closure of B.C. Packers Ltd.'s fillet processing plant at Steveston, near Richmond.

President Dick Nelson told the Times in a telephone interview that the three-year-old plant had had "a lot of money invested in it but it just didn't work out."

He said that the economic situation had forced the decision to close. The 250 employees in the plant would be transferred to a salmon cannery on the site. He admitted that this employment would be seasonal, resulting in loss of jobs once the salmon runs end.

"We found it was taking much longer to get loads, making the operation highly uneconomic."

REDUCED CATCHES

Homer Stevens, secretary-treasurer of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, agreed that the Russian dragnets had made huge inroads into the Canadian dragnets' hauls.

"Some of their nets can scoop up 40 tons of fish at a time. This is another of many reasons why the fishing limits should be extended to include the continental shelf."

STEVENS
blames dragnets

He added that the company wasn't giving all its reasons for ditching its fillet processing plant.

EASTERN EMPHASIS

Stevens accused the company of making its closure decision in order to lay more emphasis on its operations on the east coast where federal subsidies are given to help build up trawling fleets and processing plants.

"B.C. Packers began to expand into east coast operations when George Weston became the major shareholder two years ago."

"Weston owns a lot of the fishing operation on the east coast, including Connors Bros. in the Bay of Fundy, one of the

Sommers Loses, Storms Out

By Canadian Press

The political comeback trail for Robert Sommers ended Monday night when the former lands and forest minister led about 50 supporters out of a Social Credit nomination meeting in the Rossland-Trail riding before his name was even put forward.

The walkout followed a heated debate between Sommers supporters and George Driedger, chairman of the meeting and president of the British Columbia Social Credit League, and left the way clear for Education Minister Donald Brocks to secure the nomination by acclamation.

"I wanted an honest contest — I didn't get it," said Mr. Sommers, who claimed a ruling by Mr. Driedger left him with no voting supporters.

"If I'd lost this dispute, you would not have heard me cry."

If I'd won you would not have heard me cry."

Mr. Sommers, who served more than two years of a five-year jail term for bribery and conspiracy in the issuing of forest management licences while he held the portfolio, said he is undecided about contesting the Aug. 27 provincial election in Rossland-Trail as an independent.

Chaos broke out at the nomination meeting in Trail involving Sommers supporters who showed up waving $1 constituency association cards they claimed entitled them to vote on the nomination.

NO CARDS

Mr. Driedger said the only persons eligible to vote were those with $5 membership cards — which most of the Sommers supporters didn't have.

The debate ended when a Sommers man suggested to the former cabinet minister that they leave the meeting in protest. Fifty of the 350 persons present followed them out the door.

"I will not go to the courts," said Mr. Sommers. "I've had a lot of experience in court. They cost an awful lot of money and I haven't got it."

Mr. Brocks, who took over in Rossland-Trail after Mr. Sommers went to jail, did not mention his predecessor's aborted candidacy in his acceptance speech.

B.C. Tel Talks Enter 5th Day

A marathon bargaining session Monday in the five-week-old B.C. Telephone strike ended at 1:30 a.m. today and negotiators were back in the conference room this morning for their fifth day of talks.

Douglas Fir Overcut Says Study

Overcutting will continue to cause a decrease in the annual cuts of the Douglas fir, a B.C. labor department study predicts.

Coupled with growing demands for B.C. lumber, the decline of this "high-value species" is forcing the forest industry to make larger cuts of the smaller, lower-quality balsam, hemlock and spruce trees.

The research branch report also notes that greater use of the smaller logs will pose adjustment in problems in production.

At the same time, productivity in the B.C. woods is expected to increase by about 10 cubic feet per hour to 44 feet in the next six years, while the labor force remains static. However, fewer workers will be used in the woods as more sophisticated equipment is put into use.

Demand for lumber from B.C. woods will continue to rise, the study found, predicting a 22 per cent increase in harvest by 1975. There also will be expansion of the plywood and veneer industry on the coast, even more in the interior.

But the report expects pulp production to decline on the coast by about 20 per cent to 65 per cent of the provincial total, which will be substantially greater by 1975.

Reking Leader Dead

TOKYO (AP) — Hsien Nankang, member of the standing committee of the Chinese Communist party, died in Peking Saturday, Peking radio reported today. He was 68. The radio said Hsien, a native of Formosa, served Nationalist China's military delegation in Japan before he "defected" to mainland China in 1951.

Representatives of the striking Federation of Telephone Workers and B.C. Tel met federal conciliator D. S. Tysoe for more than 12 hours with neither side indicating what progress has been made.

Talks resumed Friday at the urging of Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey after more than a month of stalemate. The federation began its strike June 23 in support of a 32 per cent wage increase, and the company has since carried on its communications services with management, supervisory and summer relief personnel.

Hugh Gow, chairman of the Victoria area strike committee, said Monday that negotiations to that point had been productive.

Both sides have agreed to Tysoe's request to make no comment on the negotiations until meaningful agreement has been reached.

Gow said a second $25 distribution would be made Friday to federation members qualifying for strike benefits.

About 230 of the local's 300 members may receive strike pay, provided they have done picket duty or other jobs in support of the strike, and have not benefited by outside employment.

HOLIDAY PAY

Gow cleared up a question of annual vacations which fall within the strike period. Employees will receive any holiday pay they would normally be entitled to, since this would be for service completed in the previous 12 months.

But whether holiday time occurring during the strike will be rescheduled after the strike is negotiable.

Papal Guard Deserts

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — One of Pope Paul's Swiss bodyguards has deserted — probably the first to do so since the guard was formed by Pope Julius II in 1505, a guard officer announced today. The guard, Kaspar Holzgang, disappeared without a trace last month from the 100-member army.

Later in an interview, he said he didn't believe Mr. Sommers would run as an independent and "even if he did, he would have a minimal effect."

BERGER HIT

Earlier, Ray Williston, the present lands and forests minister, lashed out at New Democratic Party leader Tom Berger who criticized the government's stand on pollution.

Mr. Berger had said the government had failed to enforce anti-pollution legislation that had been law for 13 years.

Mr. Williston said Monday that it did not matter how many anti-pollution laws were on the books until people became interested in backing the government on its stand.

WILSON

McPherson Fund Use For Swim Pool Seen

By JIM HUME

Former mayor R. B. Wilson Monday scotched the claim that McPherson Estate funds could not be used for the proposed new Victoria swimming pool.

Ald. Robert Baird has expressed doubts that the cash remaining in the McPherson Estate could properly be used for the project.

A confidante of T. S. McPherson during his life, Wilson said he had no reservations whatsoever on use of the remaining

$1.2 million in McPherson funds for the aquatic facility.

McPherson "primarily felt that there were certain expenditures it was normal for the taxpayers to pick up," he said. "He felt that he had the opportunity to provide his funds for the extras, the icing on the cake if you like," Wilson said.

MISUNDERSTOOD

Wilson said he wished to make clear one of the most misunderstood aspects of the McPherson legacy.

"There has been, from time to time, the suggestion that the McPherson capital should remain untouched while using the interest for various projects," he said.

This was not so. "He wanted the capital used for specific major projects and I think the pool fits in with his desires perfectly."

Paying one of his rare visits to city hall since he retired from the chief magistrate's chair in 1965, Wilson, now chancellor of the University of Victoria, said the McPherson Theatre and Royal Athletic Park were two other good examples of how McPherson wanted his gift to the city spent.

QUITE PRECISE

"With these two things accomplished there really aren't too many areas left in which his legacy can do something special within the terms of his will. And remember, the terms of the will are quite precise; the funds must be spent on buildings."

"Had it not been for the McPherson funds I can conceive of no way in which the city could have financed either the theatre or the park. And I can think of no way in which a new pool can be built unless McPherson funds are used."

Wilson said he would have preferred to see the pool located closer to the arena.

"But I am sure the committee studying the site problem has investigated every possibility," he said.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, who earlier had explained the detailed pool plans to Wilson, said he too was convinced that the proposed aquatic facility

Civil War Truce Bid Rejected

From Reuters-AP

LAGOS (CP) — The Nigerian government today rejected a Biafran proposal for a temporary truce in the civil war while Pope Paul is in Africa this week.

An authorized spokesman, asked to comment on the truce plea by Biafran Leader Gen. Odumegwu Ojukwu, said: "This is a silly and stupid suggestion. We do not want to give it any thought at all."

But African sources in Kampala said intensive efforts to get a new round of peace talks started would be made in the Ugandan capital during the pontiff's visit there.

Pope Paul will arrive in Kampala Thursday for a three-day church convocation. He said Sunday his visit also has "an ardent and painful intention—that of peace," and he expressed willingness earlier to do anything he could to mediate between the Nigerians and Biafrans.

Gen. Odumegwu Ojukwu, the Biafran leader, said Monday "if Africa cannot have a permanent peace now," it should "respect the pontiff's presence and honor his lofty purpose by ensuring that peace reigns in Africa during his stay on the continent."

REBUFFED PROPOSALS

The Nigerian government has rebuffed past proposals for a truce, contending that the Biafran secessionists would use a ceasefire to regroup without solving the basic problems involved in the war.

A government statement said: "Diplomatic speculation indicates there is a possibility of the opportunity being seized during the Pope's visit ... to encourage some sort of dialogue between the Nigerian delegation and the delegations from some of the countries which are supporting the Biafran rebels, and it is believed that with this possibility in mind the federal government apparently appointed Chief Enahoro to head the delegation."

Ugandan President Milton Obote was chairman during an unsuccessful round of peace talks in Kampala in May, 1968.

Enahoro led the Nigerian delegation to those talks and to another round of unsuccessful talks in Addis Ababa last August.

DUE IN UGANDA

Observers in Kampala also noted that the presidents of two African countries that have recognized Biafra, Julius Nyerere of Tanzania and Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, are due in Uganda Wednesday.

"I would be very much surprised if they did not talk about Biafra with President Obote and anyone from Nigeria or Biafra," a top African diplomat observed.

Pope Paul is officially visiting Africa to honor 22 Ugandan martyrs who died in the 19th century. He also will address the closing session of the first all-Africa conference of Roman Catholic bishops the day he arrives.

Ojukwu said in his plea for a truce that "the government and people of Biafra join all men of goodwill in Africa to welcome and wish the Pope well on his coming visit to Africa."

largest sardine canneries in the business."

He added, "They're not making the kind of profits they want at Steveston, so it makes sense to switch more attention to the subsidized east coast."

Nelson denies that the subsidies had any impact on the decision to close the plant.

He said that about 60 fishermen would also be affected by the closure. Stevens estimates that double that figure are affected.

Stevens said many west coast Canadian dragners are being put out of business by the combined fishing of Russian, Japanese and American fleets.

"Some of those large Russian and Japanese vessels can drag from 400 to 500 fathoms while ours are restricted to about 100 fathoms."

He said the reciprocal three-mile fishing limit rights between the U.S. and Canada should be changed.

"Our fishermen don't go south or north but fish mainly off the coast of Vancouver Island. It's a one-way street."

Asked about the possibility of the west coast fishing industries being subsidized like those in the east, Nelson said that this could be done if the coast was declared "a depressed area," similar to the action taken in the Okanagan.

Stevens retorted that west coast fishing companies have generally fought against subsidization "because they would have to show their profit structure."

Nelson admitted that B.C. Packers had invested in a cannery in Newfoundland but pointed out that "several have gone broke there."

He said his company had no plans for closing down its plant at Ogden Point which is used for cold storage and the freezing of salmon and halibut.

G.I. Charged In Shooting

DA NANG (AP) — A 27-year-old United States marine sergeant has been charged with murder in the fatal shooting of an Australian girl singer, marine spokesmen said today.

Sgt. James W. Killen of Birmingham, Ala., was charged Monday with the fatal shooting of Katherine Ann Warren, 20, Miss Warren was shot through the heart July 20 as she was finishing a performance with six other entertainers at a marine non-commissioned officers' club five miles southwest of Da Nang.

Political Goal Denied

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson Monday dismissed an accusation that political motivation lay behind charges brought against Vancouver financier A. G. Duncan Crux, now facing an extradition hearing in Nassau in the Bahamas.

During the hearing Monday Crux said he would argue political motivation in the laying of 21 charges of theft and fraud in B.C.

He did not elaborate during the hearing. "In British Columbia we have a hot political situation," he said.

"It is obvious on the face of it that there was no political motivation," said Peterson. "Months of investigation by senior law enforcement officials preceded the action in this case."

Peterson refused to comment further because "the matter is before the courts."

"And that will pave the way for construction when sewers are available," she said.

The scheme has not failed, Ald. Gunning said, since 13, and soon 15, families are living in decent accommodation they wouldn't have had otherwise.

"We should keep the way open to add to the scheme. No one could foresee the increases when our program was launched."

She noted that Saanich asked for permission to buy houses to which sewers will be extended during the next three years, but no approval was forthcoming.

Priority in the housing scheme was given to those most in need, limited to welfare families.

Rents match the shelter component in the social assistance benefit. A mother with two children, for example, would have a shelter component of $60 a month and this becomes the rent for a low-income house.

Island Power Link Planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority said today it will link Northern Vancouver Island into its power grid for the first time late next year with a new $6,000,000 transmission line.

The 138,000-volt line will run 90 miles north up the Nimpkish Valley from Gold River on the west coast of the island to a new substation to be constructed near Port Hardy on the east coast.

From the substation, to be named Quaisno, the line will run a further 27 miles westward to Jeune Landing near Port Alice.

A section of the line serving Rumble Beach from Port Alice will initially carry 25,000 volts.

must be shored up, not cut, to deter the Communists and prevent more Vietnamese.

THAILAND FEARFUL

He also was told of fears that the U.S. might be exposing Thailand, a staunch ally of Washington, to Communist penetration and subversion if the U.S. withdrew all ground forces and relied on an air and naval shield in the Pacific.

Thailand and Vargha met Nixon separately and their appraisal of the situation was that an American presence was required to stop the Communists, who otherwise would be expected to turn their sights on Thailand and other countries at the end of the Vietnam war.

Nixon met with Vargha and Thanat before conferring with six U.S. ambassadors and two chargé d'affaires summoned here from their Asian posts.

The ambassadors were Ellsworth Bunker, Vietnam; MacMurtrei Godley, Laos; Arthur Hummel, Burma; Carol Laise, Nepal; Bunker's wife; Robert Neumann, Afghanistan; and Andrew Corry, Ceylon.

Sources reported that Nixon wanted their views on reaction in the countries in which they are stationed to his new concept of the U.S. role in Asian defence and also a recent Russian proposal for a collective security system in Asia.

The president arranged to hold separate talks with Bunker on the Vietnam war and the Paris peace negotiations as well as with Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the American commander in Vietnam.

The U.S. has six big air bases and 48,000 military personnel here to support the war effort in Vietnam. One base, Ubon, was raided early Monday by Communist guerrillas but Thai military sources dismissed the attack as a propaganda move.

CUT IS ANTICIPATED

A parallel cut in U.S. forces here is anticipated to match the pullout from Vietnam.

During the talks, or perhaps at a working luncheon, Kitikachorn or Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman is almost bound to raise the question of American aid reduction to Thailand—in both military equipment to Thai police who bear the brunt of anti-guerrilla action and in rural development.

Rural development in Thailand, to a lesser extent than in Vietnam, is important in winning the support of residents of backward regions—such as the country's northeastern border with Laos—who feel neglected by the central government.

U.S. Budget Surplus $3 Billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States government ended its fiscal year last month with a budget surplus of $3,100,000,000, the treasury department and the budget bureau said Monday.

This was the first year since fiscal 1960 that the federal budget had showed a surplus. In that year, it was $240,000,000. The last year that a larger surplus was shown was fiscal 1957, with $3,200,000,000.

The surplus was $1,900,000,000 higher than the estimates made in April. The difference was attributed to an increase in tax receipts, which were $1,800,000,000 above April estimates.

The figures showed receipts of $187,800,000,000 and outlays of $184,800,000,000 for fiscal year 1969, which ended June 30. These are the rounded figures, leaving the apparent difference $3,000,000,000 rather than the rounded $3,100,000,000 surplus. The government is anticipating a surplus of $6,300,000,000 for the current fiscal year — assuming its tax program, especially extension of 10 per cent income tax surcharge, is approved.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Southern British Columbia will remain under the influence of a ridge of high pressure so that sunny weather should predominate at least through Wednesday. Meanwhile, a little rain is expected to spread into the north coastal district tonight in advance of a weather system from the Gulf of Alaska. It will also likely set off a few showers in the central interior on Wednesday. The disturbance, however, is forecast to peter out before reaching southern parts of the province.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

There are proportionately more Americans and Canadians laid low by the stress of their work and living than are people in the tropical countries. In fact, some medical meteorologists think, we who live in a fast-moving, rapidly changing business world in North America may be driving ourselves too hard.

A North American living in a climate that is constantly changing—a climate that booms up and releases lots of energy—probably tends to wear out sooner than a fisherman living a gentle life on a tropical island off southern Mexico.

The fisherman might live longer, but he is up against an adversary the North American doesn't have to square off against as often in a lifetime: the tropical man has a thousand more chances for infection.

Laughing Gas No Fun

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) —Nora Ruffcorn, 15, who tried breathing laughing gas for kicks on a double date seven weeks ago, is learning again to eat and to walk by herself.

When police found her, she was having convulsions on the front seat of her boyfriend's car. The boy-friend, Brad Hunter, 17, was outside, nauseous.

Inside the car were Clare Herrick, 18, and Peter Strada, 17, and an empty four-foot tank that had held nitrous oxide—better known as the dentist's pain killer, laughing gas. Within hours Clare and Peter were dead.

Nora says the nightmare began June 2 as a lark.

"It was just a high," she said, "like marijuana, I guess." Investigators said the couples apparently had rolled up the car windows and opened the valve of the tank.

PLEADED GUILTY

Where they got the tank is not known. Hunter has pleaded guilty in juvenile court to two counts of manslaughter.

Pure nitrous oxide is lethal if inhaled for more than 10 minutes, a San Diego anesthetist said. "The absence of oxygen... causes death much like that of drowning."

He said the gas never is administered medically in concentration greater than 80 per cent, with the remaining 20 per cent pure oxygen.

Nora was in a coma for three weeks at Scripps Memorial Hospital. Doctors expected her to die, then said she would be an invalid for life.

But a strong will and physical therapy enabled Nora to go home with her mother, who takes her back daily for three hours of work on muscle coordination.

Pipe, Guitar Eased Wait For Rescuers

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — A young mountain climber, stranded on a steep slope near here for four days, played a guitar and smoked his pipe while waiting for rescuers.

Brazda Bystryk, 21, of Kitchener, Ont., was rescued Sunday from a narrow ledge after he was injured in a 70-foot tumble down a slope. He suffered cuts to the face and feet and severe bruises that prevented him from walking.

Speaking from his hospital bed, Mr. Bystryk said he crawled—"I don't know how far, but it took me four hours"—to where he had left some camping equipment, food and his guitar.

For water he crawled to a nearby stream, but spent the rest of his time playing his guitar, singing and smoking his pipe.

Mr. Bystryk had a tent and sleeping bag, but said his condition prevented him from erecting the tent as protection against the rain.

He was taken down the mountain by park officials after a man and woman found him while hiking.

June Employment Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The department of manpower and immigration announced Monday employment in June in British Columbia increased to 834,000 from 810,000 in May. The department said all of the increase was in non-agricultural employment and there was a greater increase in male employment than in female employment.

Cutters Hear Last Supermarket Bid

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators for Lower Mainland supermarkets Monday night told provincial mediator Clive McKee that they will not bargain any longer with locked-out meatcutters.

C. George Robson, chief spokesman for the six chains, said:

"We told him Mr. McKee we feel we had reached a basis of settlement with the meatcutters and we are not going to offer any more."

No further stores opened by Lodom Holdings, Shop-Easy, High-Low and Food Fair opened last week after about 3,000 locked-out retail clerks voted to accept a 50-cent hourly wage increase over two years. Basic rates range from $2.35 to $3.45 an hour.

About a dozen Safeway stores were scheduled to reopen today or Wednesday and a company official said no decision has been taken on whether or when other outlets will be back in business.

The meatcutters originally demanded a $1 an hour wage increase plus a four-day, 36-hour work week. They are picketing about 30 Super Valu stores and clerks are not crossing the lines.

CLERKS MARCH

Earlier, 55 angry clerks marched to their union office demanding an immediate return to their jobs. They were protesting the fact that the 800 meatcutters are preventing hundreds of retail clerks from getting back to work.

Officials of the retail clerks union told demonstrators there is nothing they can do to speed up the return to work.

In Natal, mineworkers employed by Kaiser Resources

Ltd. have deferred for two weeks any decisions about a union welfare fund criticized by local United Mine Workers of America officials.

Jim Caldwell, secretary of the Natal local, said Monday there has been objections to the welfare fund section of the new five-year agreement whereby Kaiser pays 8½ cents a ton on the first 1,025,000 tons and five cents on the rest of the tonnage mined.

NO PROGRESS

No progress was reported Monday in direct talks aimed at averting a strike by longshoremen at Vancouver and other B.C. ports.

A conciliation board failed to settle the contract dispute between the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association and the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union.

The board recommended a 70-cent-an-hour increase over two years on the present longshoremen's rate of $3.88.

Best Getaway Car

PARIS (Reuters) — Two Frenchmen arrested for stealing a snazzy English sports car confessed to stealing five other identical models, police said Monday. Asked if they were sports car buffs, one of the suspects replied: "No, we use them so we could make a faster get-away."

Bennett to Talk Unity At Premiers' Session

Premier Bennett will issue a "new call for Canadian unity" at the provincial premiers' conference next week at Quebec City.

Bennett prior to a cabinet meeting Monday said he is leaving the provincial campaign to attend the conference because he feels Canadian unity is the big issue at stake.

"The 10 premiers represent all of the Canadian people," said Bennett.

"Unity will not be achieved by squabbling in the federal house but by unity among the premiers," he said.

Bennett said he takes no concrete proposals to the conference, "only goodwill. That's the most important thing in the world today," he said.

Bennett arrives at the conference Monday and is expected back in Vancouver Thursday to intensify his efforts in the provincial campaign.

This weekend the premier will be the star of a Social Credit extravaganza in Vernon.

Saturday he will speak at the 17th anniversary celebration of the Secord government in B.C. Friday, in Kelowna, Bennett will officially enter his 10th provincial election campaign.

SHUFFLE SEEN IN CABINET

By DAVE MCINTOSH
OTTAWA (CP)—As many as seven to nine ministers may be affected in a federal cabinet shuffle predicted for August, and speculation Monday centred on the future of External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

It was considered likely Sharp would be shifted to another ministry if he does not leave the government altogether. A possible successor in external affairs is Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin.

Such a shift could open up the possibility of a major redistribution of portfolios. Prime Minister Trudeau is said to want to make any changes in time to give shifted ministers a chance to learn their new jobs before Parliament reconvenes Oct. 22.

Privy Council President Donald Macdonald is expected to be relieved of his duty as government House leader, especially after the acrimonious windup in the Commons last week, including government imposition of closure to end a ruse debate.

The cabinet Monday began an intensive series of meetings designed to reach some major decisions on government policies before present ministers depart for August vacations.

Defenceless Targets

THE ISRAELI-ARAB HOSTILITIES are as close to being called outright war as may be reached in these days of undeclared conflicts. For weeks guerrilla raids, border shelling and air bombing have heated the tense Middle East situation, and although the full-scale attacks of 1967 have not yet been staged, there is every likelihood that the continuing acceleration of the fighting may lead to this at any time.

As clear as the demonstration of warfare is the demonstration that at this point in history the United Nations has no effective way either to stop the fighting or to construct an effective and acceptable peace. That is a serious conclusion to be drawn regarding a world organization which has been in existence just one year short of a quarter of a century. It is true that the UN had some success in damping down several other outbreaks which threatened world peace, but the Arab-Israeli confrontation has provided nothing but a series of humiliations and setbacks for the global body. The hasty removal of the Canadian and other truce observers from the Gaza area when the Six-Day War broke out two years ago did nothing to enhance UN prestige, even though it was a logical move for a tiny force which was lightly armed and under orders to do little but watch.

Now the question of UN truce observation is again in the headlines, with the death by shellfire of a Swedish member of the UN groups along the Suez Canal. Secretary-General U Thant said several weeks ago that further endangering of his observer corps could result in withdrawal of the whole organization, and he urged a halt on the activities of the gunners opposing each other across the Canal. That the death resulted from an Israeli shell is of less importance than the fact that it occurred at all, for it is largely due to good fortune that Arab operations have not also produced a toll of neutral lives.

The United Nations has two choices in this crisis. Either it should remove the observers from danger, for their ordeal has not produced any halt in the shooting and they are needlessly exposing themselves to death or injury; or it should apply and enforce restrictions which would ensure that neither side would risk hitting a UN official. The latter choice appears almost impossible to impose, since neither Israelis nor Arabs have shown any real regard for UN authority, and the sharp dissension between the combatants is invariably duplicated by partisans in the UN Assembly.

It appears pointless to have the UN observers on the scene like "defenceless targets in a shooting gallery", as U Thant has termed it, especially if they are not able to achieve their purpose. Familiarity with their presence has apparently led to contempt. These men have displayed a bravery and tenacity in their idealistic duty which deserves better support from the organization which they serve. They should not be asked to do more than the UN itself is prepared to do.

Education and Responsibility

THE FIRST CITIZENS' FUND Committee has emphasized two points in its proposals for spending the $1.5 million annual earnings expected from the special fund set up by the government last year. It wishes to see the money channelled chiefly into educational encouragement for the Indians and it wants to stimulate Indian participation in financing the various projects through shared cost arrangements.

Clearly, the committee does not see the suggested disbursements as mere handouts. It seeks, instead, to appeal to the development of responsibility among the people who will benefit. The concept is sound, provided the Indians are in a position to meet their portion of the shared costs—for Indians, on a per capita basis, have incomes far below the Canadian average.

The problem of raising funds for the Indian share may be less daunting than the earning capacity of different band members might imply. Some bands have substantial funds. Where they cannot provide sufficient to cover their share of programs, recourse may still be made to Ottawa, which has money available for such projects.

The committee's headstart proposal, under which Indian children would be given special preparation before entering the school system, implies important changes. In this respect, the home influence is of special importance. Provision of financial assistance for secondary school and higher education would apparently supplement the kind of help already being furnished by the federal government, but it could be a highly useful supplement. The shared cost feature is also significant in proposed support for local arts and crafts where again the initiative must come from the Indians.

In general the committee report seems to be saying that help is available in many areas to assist Indians to reach a higher standard of living and enable them to enjoy life more fully in the current age—but, to a large extent, only where they demonstrate a desire for such advancement. The demonstration would be proved by the acceptance of some obligation, including partial financing by the bands where that is feasible. Under such circumstances, no injury would be inflicted on Indian self-respect.

Coming Up to the 'Anniversary'

A CERTAIN AIR OF NERVOUSNESS is reported in Prague as Czechoslovakia approaches "the anniversary" on August 21. No one predicts what might happen as the people mark the date on which the reformist liberalization of the country was checked by the threat of force from Warsaw Pact nations. Plans have been indicated for a "day of mourning" sponsored by students and workers' leaders, but no aggressive demonstrations are suggested. People have been asked to walk to work on the "anniversary" to fill the streets. Boycotts of entertainment centres and brief mid-day work halts in factories have been proposed.

These are small gestures of defiance aimed at reflecting popular feelings over the loss of liberties. They need not produce bloody clashes, which, in any event would be futile under the Moscow-approved ruling forces.

In point of fact, the Russians have achieved virtually all they aspired to almost one year ago in Czechoslovakia. While they have yet to wring an admission from Gustav Husak, the Slovak Communist Party chief who took over from Dubcek, that the intervention was justified, they have found other Czechoslovakians to defend the Russian action as one to combat the "counter-revolution" and to protect freedom and socialism in Czechoslovakia.

Under these circumstances, demonstrations probably will be modest. But the occasion of the "anniversary" will not, apparently, be allowed to pass without some token reminder that the liberalizing spirit is still alive, though fettered, in the land.

FROM TORONTO

No Cures by the Lash

ALTHOUGH the flogging of criminals is not as popular with the courts as it was, it still has its advocates—as witness a recent decision of the Ontario Court of Appeal upholding a lower court sentence of four years and 10 lashes against a 21-year-old man for indecently assaulting a 15-year-old girl. Only Mr. Justice John Brooke of the five appeal judges considered that the whipping was improper. The others did not give reasons for their views.

All of which has prompted Correctional Services Minister Allan Grossman and Mrs. Isabel LeBourdais, author of The Trial of Stephen Truscott, to suggest that judges should either have to administer the cat-o-nine-tails if they impose it as part of a sentence or witness its application when the sentence is carried out.

Writing in the current issue of Chitty's Law Journal, the executive director of the John Howard Society of Ontario, A. M. Kirkpatrick, has more compelling reasons to offer. Corporal punishment is wrong, he declares, because it makes the criminal worse instead of better.

The Society, which is concerned with the rehabilitation of male offenders, once assembled a number of men who had been lashed for rule-breaking while in prison and had them interviewed by the Parliamentary Committee on Corporal and Capital Punishment which reported in 1956.

Generating Hate

"A verbatim report of these interviews was made," Mr. Kirkpatrick relates, "and revealed general hatred by the recipient of the officers involved in his strapping, a determination to get even when released from the institution, and an attitude of greater caution in infringing rules without getting caught."

"These interviews revealed that the strap had not been a deterrent as most of these men had experienced it several times and most had returned to prison on sentences subsequent to their having been strapped."

The same considerations apply, Mr. Kirkpatrick argues, to the sentencing of convicted persons to be whipped: the deterrent theory is a fallacy.

The Criminal Code provides that a court may impose the lash for rape, attempted rape, sexual intercourse with females under 14, indecent assault on a female, incest, indecent assault on a male, robbery, armed burglary, choking and drugging. Mr. Kirkpatrick notes most of these are sexual offences presumably carried out during an emotionally aroused state or as the result of a disordered mind.

"Corporal punishment would not be considered appropriate in the treatment of mentally disturbed persons and therefore should not be considered in sex offences which are manifestly psychological in derivation," he writes. "In any event, under such circumstances, any potential deterrent effect is not likely to operate as a controlling factor."

Expect to Escape

As for robbery and armed burglary, these are cold blooded, planned crimes undertaken despite the possibility of punishment simply because the offender has so planned the crime that he does not expect to be apprehended and punished. "It is doubtful that offenders committing these offences are at all aware of the jeopardy inherent in the Criminal Code, namely that they may be subject to corporal punishment," Mr. Kirkpatrick declares. "This reduces any potential deterrent value."

"In general it may be said that offenders do not rationally balance out the prospect of corporal punishment as a factor in their decision or compulsion to commit an offence but are primarily concerned with the possibility of apprehension and imprisonment."

Even judges who impose the lash would probably agree with Mr. Kirkpatrick up to the point, but would argue there are some crimes so vicious that the punishment can only be meted out by flogging. Mr. Kirkpatrick replies that the viciousness is in reality evidence of the warped or distorted personality of the offender, and this is not likely to be improved by such bodily ministrations.

All too often, he notes, such disturbed personalities are themselves due in no small degree to faulty parental control in which corporal punishment was used in the home as the sole means of discipline, untimely by affection or judgment. "The use of corporal punishment on young offenders would reinforce the view so many of them have that they are not wanted and have no place in society, and would further add to the hostile and aggressive behaviour they have developed through home and environmental experiences," he writes.

The common objective of all concerned in this whole process should be the protection of society by the rehabilitation of the offender. But no one can rehabilitate another person. Opportunities and inducements may be provided but the desire to change must come from within the individual.

"It is manifestly unsound to send a man to a penal institution which, it is hoped, has the resources and intention to help him, and to provide, by court sentence, that he be lashed by those officers who are to be his examples and guides to re-establishment. His hostility to the institution and the staff is likely to mount and obscure later efforts to help him adjust."

Most provinces no longer flog prisoners in their institutions for rule-breaking: Ontario abolished the lash in 1960 without any increase in disciplinary problems. But it is still being "phased out" in federal penitentiaries and many judges, as the Ontario Court of Appeal has indicated, still think there is a place for it in sentencing. The time has come, Mr. Kirkpatrick declares, to abolish it completely.

CAMOUFLAGED EGGS

By CHARLES BARTLETT

Flexibility for Arms Talks

THE approaching talks on arms limitations are menaced before they begin by the spectre of ugly little nests of nuclear warheads coolly camouflaged by bland nosecones which can be counted. These are the eggs which can defy man's most hopeful opportunity to impose rationality upon the arms race. They are newly hatched and immature as weapons and yet they confound the disarmament planners because they can be tested and deployed beyond the perception of the spy satellites which are crucial substitutes for the confidence which is lacking between the Soviets and Americans.

If the talks end, as many suspect they will, with agreement only to limit ABM construction to thin defences which may be useful against Chinese missiles, both nations will have saved great sums of money but the descent into the abyss of mutual destruction will not have been halted.

The American position on the MIRV is taking shape cautiously because of the risks it entails. Since the testing of multiple warheads and their deployment are both presumed to be concealable, an anti-MIRV agreement will leave an option for the Soviets, licensed to deceive by the character of their society, that will not be available to the United States.

Hopeless to Monitor

Some disarmament specialists take the view that it may be hopeless to monitor an agreement against deploying the MIRV. It plainly cannot be monitored from the air and it could be extremely difficult to monitor on the ground. The only real hope, this group says, is to stop the testing quickly enough to insure that development does not progress to the point at which the weapons can be put in place.

But scientists within the Defence Department, whose ships observe the Soviet tests in the Pacific, maintain that either side might advantageously deploy its weapon without further tests. Doubts about accuracy would be compensated by the multi-warheads. Furthermore these scientists insist it is possible to test without detection because the tests do not involve nuclear explosions.

So the hard line position on the MIRV question is that the United States has only one practical choice, to insist on an agreement which prohibits deployment and gives access to men with screw drivers who can look inside the missiles to insure that the ugly nests are not there.

Many veterans of disarmament negotiations argue it is futile to bring up again the question of on-site inspection. The Soviets will never agree, they say, and the talks will be stymied. Why go back to the stalemate of the 1950's?

But the thinking which prevails within the Nixon administration is that things have changed. The privacy and secrecy which the Russians cherish have been ruthlessly eroded by the spy satellites. Whereas in the old days some 30,000 inspectors might have been needed to enforce a nuclear agreement, small teams can now do the job because satellite pictures tell them where to look.

Moreover it is felt that the Soviets may be anxious enough to cap the costs of the arms race to swallow their distaste for on-site inspection. Andrei Gromyko's recent speech had a ring, familiar to Americans, of urgent desire to transform military priorities into advances on the domestic front.

If this analysis is correct, the talks could move past the ABM and MIRV toward the notion of a freeze upon the purchase and deployment of all new weaponry. There again the government divides between those who would go as fast as the Soviets are willing to move and those who maintain it will be wiser to end this first round with a tidy package which can be supervised closely enough to build confidence on both sides.

The neat package is more likely than the freeze because everyone is puzzled by the complexities involved in choking off the onrush of military technology. But it is also apparent that the arms race, blocked in one channel, will move like an angry river into other channels unless other dikes are constructed.

So the mood is flexible as the negotiators wait to learn what the Kremlin has in mind. The prospects rest heavily on what can be done about the MIRV.

ISRAEL REPORT

A Detour From Peace

By A. H. RASKIN

NO audience survey is needed to determine Israel's most popular radio program. It is the hourly news broadcast. Thirteen times a day Israelis stop whatever else they are doing to learn whether there has been some crippling new act of terror by their Arab enemies. If the initial bulletin is routine, they go back to their tasks relieved—for an hour. Recently officials in Jerusalem seriously contemplated recommending that the number of news roundups be cut to 10 as a contribution to easing tension. The conclusion was that such a move might make people worry more rather than less.

Yet for a visitor freshly arrived from New York the startling thing about Israel is how muted the tension is. The external impression is one of normalcy in homes, shops, hotels, factories and farms. Rome is a thousand times more taxing on nerves and blood pressure than Tel Aviv or Haifa. People walk the street of Jerusalem—the Old City as well as the new—without anxiety at any hour of day or night.

Peaceful Appearance

In the occupied territories along the West Bank, one can drive for hours without seeing more than a handful of Israeli soldiers. The Arabs tend their flocks, and their farms just as they did before the Six-Day War two years ago.

The multiplication in both number and severity of clashes in the last two weeks makes it plain that Israel's hopes for a placid summer are not going to be fulfilled. But that fact has merely stiffened Israeli resistance to major power intervention in attempts to establish a Middle East peace. Premier Golda Meir and her associates are convinced that all the forays by Egyptian commandos and Palestinian guerrillas are intended to stampede Washington and Moscow into more frenzied activity and thus stave off any chance of direct negotiations between Israel and the Arab states.

Distrust

The Israelis, embittered by two decades of broken promises, have no confidence in any international guarantees of a settlement with the Arabs. They distrust the Soviet Union and have little faith that anyone in the Nixon Administration is astute enough to do better than they in negotiations aimed at preserving Israel's right to survive in peace. This basic reserve is reinforced by fear that Washington's primary interest in extricating itself from the Vietnam War may lead the U.S. to trade away points of vital concern to Israel in the big two bargaining.

In effect, the Israelis say: Keep hands off and eventually—in five, 10 or 20 years—the Arabs will decide they have to sit down and negotiate a stable peace with Israel. They believe there is no danger of a Soviet-American confrontation over the Middle East, even though President Nixon said there was, and there would be no trouble at all if the Arabs would respect their ceasefire commitments. We want peace on a basis that will endure, they say, and that peace can come only when the Arabs negotiate directly with Israel.

Depressing Naivete

There is a depressing naivete to all this, especially when each day brings a worse outbreak, and Mrs. Meir herself warns that the Israelis have rewritten the old maxim "An eye for an eye" to make it seven eyes for every one her people lose. But the resoluteness of Israel's determination to see it through, even if it means standing against the whole world, cannot be doubted.

Now comes the astonishing statement of Israel's information minister that the Gaza Strip will never be relinquished, a statement that flies in the face of private assurances other officials have been giving for months.

The question with which a visitor departs is a sad one. Has this people, so full of idealism and accomplishment, become a captive of the same self-righteousness that afflicted its oppressors through 4,000 years of struggle?

Israel's present course seems a detour from the permanent peace it so manifestly needs and desires.

Looking Back

From the Times of July 29, 1969.

A double application has been made to the railway commission over the E and N bridge. The city wants to protect the right of people to pass over the structure and the right of water traffic to pass under without any delay or awaiting the pleasure of the railway company. The harbor commission complained to the city that the railway commission was showing a lack of consideration.

Will Everglades Be Sacrificed?

By PAUL BROOKS

"Human history," wrote H. G. Wells, "more and more becomes a race between education and catastrophe."

A precise illustration of his thesis, in terms of land use, is the 29-square-mile jetport about to be built (unless someone stops it) in the heart of the Florida Everglades.

Promoted by the Dade County (Miami) Port Authority, backed by four major airlines, by the Federal Aviation Agency, by local boosters and land speculators, it threatens the very existence of that unique subtropical wildlife paradise, Everglades National Park.

The land has been condemned and work already begun on the intended location only six miles north of the Park boundary. The first stage, the training field, will be in operation this fall.

"A new city is going to rise up in the middle of Florida," says Alan C. Stewart, Director of the Port Authority. "You are going to have one whether you like it or not."

If he is right, the impact on the surrounding country will be devastating.

Local speculators will get rich; but Everglades Park, which belongs to all the people, will be doomed.

Pressures on land and particularly on water in Southern Florida are already at a maximum; zoning for their protection at a minimum.

Yet the physical environment is extraordinarily fragile, and vulnerable to misuse.

The Everglades — which, with the great cypress swamp, covers most of the interior — consists of a vast shallow, slow-moving river.

Fresh water during the wet season moves from the region of Lake Okechobee southward through the state water conservation areas and (when unimpeded) on through the Park, to empty eventually into the Gulf of Mexico.

On this seasonal flow of pure water the life of the Park depends.

In recent drought years, excessive diversion and wastage of water by the Army Engineers has all but caused the Park to dry up.

Now the whole chain of life, from algae to alligators, is threatened by the future water needs, and by the inevitable pollution from an airport and city rising literally out of a swamp; the domestic and industrial effluent, the pesticides and herbicides and fertilizers, the unburned jet fuel discharged into the air. Noise from take-offs and landings, estimated eventually at two per minute, will be intolerable.

The Port Authority has the nerve to designate the Park a "sound barrier" or buffer zone; F.A.A.'s Miami manager cracks, "Nobody will be close enough to complain — except, possibly, alligators."

Except, possibly, the million annual visitors to the Park, whose chance for a wilderness experience will be gone for ever.

The jetport project is an abortive offspring of the unholy wedlock of the booster and the engineer.

It represents the same blind permissiveness that allows industry to pollute air and water to the brink of disaster (and beyond, as witness Lake Erie), agriculture to use poisons like DDT long after the fatal results are known, the Army Engineers to dam rivers and dig canals with little concern for the total environment.

Ask the Port Authority if it knows specifically what it is doing to the Everglades and you get a litany of evasion: the matter in question is always "under study."

Fortunately, Everglades is a national park. Early in June Senator Jackson conducted hearings before the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, to review what he termed a "classic case history" of the impact of technology on the environment.

There emerged a shocking pattern of confusion and conflict between Federal, state and local authorities.

The Bureau of Transportation admits that transportation programs are on a collision course with environmental management.

The Interior Department promises to "do everything within its power" to stop the jetport if it will mean destruction of the Park.

The Corps of Engineers, however, refuses to guarantee water for the Park "until the situation gets tight."

Other and less damaging sites exist, including state-owned land near Lake Okechobee.

"Either we stop the jetport at the present site," said Senator Nelson (co-sponsor with Senator Jackson of a bill for a national environmental policy) "or we publicly admit that we are going to destroy the Park."

How War Was Won, And Won, and Won...

By PHILIP GEYELIN

WASHINGTON — Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird's recent progress report on the Vietnam war has come under a certain amount of criticism from people who apparently have no sense of tradition.

Even when allowance is made for the Pentagon's effort to tidy up the secretary's intended meaning the next day, his declaration that "we have certainly turned the corner in the war" is a worthy addition to any compilation of Familiar Vietnam Quotations.

Deputy assistant defence secretary for public affairs Jerry Friedheim was at pains the following day to say that the corner Laird was referring to had to do only with the "tremendous progress" being made in the "vietnamization" of the war, but he might as well have saved his breath — as Robert McNamara would be the first to testify. Who now recalls, or even knows, that his celebrated 1963 projection of the war's end was not originated by him, that it grew out of a joint mission with General Maxwell Taylor, that it was polished and put out by a large group of White House advisers with the approval of President Kennedy, and that it presupposed no enlargement of the enemy war effort?

That is one rule — that it is the first impression that counts — in these matters.

The second rule is more important, and it is that predictions or appraisals having to do with the course of this war, for whatever purpose they may be made, do not have a record of standing up very well. One can always hope. But the record — which is rich, argues otherwise — argues in fact, for public officials either making the most carefully measured estimates or making none at all and letting the facts, such as they are, speak for themselves.

Some selected quotations from the last 15 years: "... We have never been in a better relative position." General Westmoreland, April 10, 1968.

"... We have reached an important point when the end begins to come into view ... The enemy has many problems. He is losing control of the scattered population under his influence ... He sees the strength of his forces steadily decline ... His monsoon offensives have been failures. He was dealt a mortal blow by the installation of a freely elected representative government. The enemy's hopes are bankrupt." General Westmoreland, Nov. 21, 1967.

"... We are generally pleased ... we are very sure we are on the right track." President Johnson, July 13, 1967.

"... Progress has been made ... We have pushed the enemy farther and farther into the jungles ... We have succeeded in attaining our objectives." General Westmoreland, July 13, 1967.

"I expect the ... war to achieve very sensational results in 1967." Ambassador Lodge, Jan. 9, 1967.

"We are beginning to see some signs of success," and "There is an erosion of (enemy) morale." Secretary of State Rusk, Aug. 25, 1966.

"We have stopped losing the war." Secretary of Defence McNamara, October, 1965.

"We are not about to send American boys nine or ten thousand miles from home to do what Asian boys ought to be doing for themselves." President Johnson, Oct. 21, 1964.

"The war in Vietnam is on the right track." Ambassador Lodge, June 30, 1964.

"I think the number (of U.S. personnel) in Vietnam is not likely to increase substantially." Secretary of Defence McNamara, May 14, 1964.

"The Vietnamese ... themselves can handle this problem primarily with their own effort." Secretary of State Rusk, Feb. 24, 1964.

"The United States still hopes to withdraw its troops from South Vietnam by the end of 1965." Secretary of Defence McNamara, Feb. 19, 1964.

"I am hopeful we can bring back additional ... men ... because I personally believe this is a war the Vietnamese must fight. I don't believe we can take on that combat task for them." Secretary of Defence McNamara, Feb. 3, 1964.

"Victory ... is just months away, and the reduction of American advisers can begin any time now ... I can safely say the end of the war is in sight." Gen. Paul D. Harkins, commander of the Military Assistance Command in Saigon, Oct. 31, 1963.

"Secretary McNamara and General (Maxwell) Taylor reported their judgment that the major part of the U.S. military task can be completed by the end of 1965 ... White House statement, Oct. 2, 1963.

"I feel we shall achieve victory in 1964." Tran Van Dong, South Vietnamese general, Oct. 1, 1963.

"... South Vietnam is on its way to victory ... Frederick E. Nolting, U.S. Ambassador to South Vietnam, June 12, 1963.

"The South Vietnamese themselves are fighting their own battle, fighting well." Secretary of State Rusk, April, 1963.

"(The struggle) is turning an important corner." Secretary of State Rusk, March 8, 1963. "... The corner has definitely been turned toward victory in South Vietnam." Arthur Sylvester, assistant secretary of defence, March 8, 1963.

"There are definitely encouraging elements ... The ratio of casualties ... indicates some turning in the situation." Secretary of State Rusk, Feb. 1, 1963.

"The war in Vietnam is going well and will succeed." Secretary McNamara, Jan. 31, 1963.

"... The South Vietnamese should achieve victory in three years ... I am confident the Vietnamese are going to win the war. (The Viet Cong) face inevitable defeat." Admiral Harry D. Felt, U.S. commander-in-chief of Pacific Forces, Jan. 12, 1963.

"Every quantitative measurement shows we're winning the war ... U.S. aid to Vietnam has reached a peak and will start to level off."

BBC Looks Down Slippery, Silly Slope

By ANTHONY LEWIS

LONDON — Those concerned about the mindlessness of American television — critics, foundation executives and ordinary afflicted citizens — have often looked to British broadcasting as a model of cultivation and enlightenment. They had better look again.

The British Broadcasting Corporation has announced its plans for radio in the 1970s. In good part they amount to more time, money and frequency coverage for popular music and news, and less for serious music and talk.

The proposals should be of more than parochial British interest. For the probable trend of radio here toward the empty, the vulgar and the silly has already begun on British television — and this in a country with a tradition of public service broadcasting. Those who care may unhappily conclude that the nature of the media is to seek a low common denominator.

Still the Best

To be fair, it must be said that the BBC is still the best broadcasting service in the world. On radio there is much live — as well as recorded — classical music, and news programs undertake real analysis. On the second television channel, a somewhat experimental one on UHF, there are such joys as Alistair Cooke reminiscing and endless Englishmen and women arguing. How gloriously verbal they are.

But the main BBC television channel is hardly thought-provoking. Tonight's list, in the peak viewing period between a children's cartoon at 6:15 and the news at 10, consists of a disc jockey interview program, a collection of snips from old comedy shows, 45 minutes of song-and-dance and an old movie.

The Independent Television Authority, which licenses commercial stations here, has just reshuffled the pack. It threw out some existing licenses and admitted, for example, a promising group called London Weekend. It promised "a respect for creative talents ... high expectations of the audience," etc.

Tonight in the peak hours London Weekend has a comedy serial, a pop-variety show, one about a comic doctor, another variety show and an old movie. For the fall it has announced that it is reducing its emphasis on public affairs in favor of more old-time entertainment!

The main reason for the increasingly vacuous character of BBC television will be familiar to American chroniclers of broadcasting — ratings competition. With the introduction of a commercial channel some years ago, the BBC felt it had to keep up in the ratings lest the politicians

Lord Hill, was asked last week why a public service broadcasting system free of advertising should devote so much of its resources to separate channels of pop and light music. Why should they not be supported by sponsors? His reply suggested that Parliament might not be willing to impose licence fees for support of a radio service limited to serious music and talk and thus appealing only to a minority.

Eighty per cent of the BBC radio audience tunes to pop and light music, Lord Hill said. He added: "To please the majority is not necessarily sinful."

There for intellectuals is the rub. If 80 per cent of the listeners voluntarily choose disc jockey chatter and Fred Waring — in a country with two other channels, esthetically and informationally superior — who is to condemn them? The Royal Family, we now know, watches The Lucy Show.

Elevating Taste

The BBC's philosophy has been that a civilized country must offer an elevated alternative. People would gradually learn and enlarge their taste, it was argued; and to a significant extent that has worked. Certainly the BBC has been a remarkable force for growth in audiences for classical music, and in the number of musicians' and composers.

But it is not easy, in a commercialized society, to maintain the principle of programming deliberately for minority tastes. It takes the support of public-spirited citizens, imaginative political leaders and broadcasters with the Presbyterian backbone of the evangelist who molded the BBC, Lord Reith.

Such men are not in large supply in either Britain or the United States, but the effort to find ways of assuring some thoughtful television must go on. It is no snobbery to think that a medium with the power to shape a nation's social, political and cultural habits must do more than glaze the viewers' eyes.

(New York Times)

LUCILLE BALL ... mass appeal

who authorize its revenue wonder why its audiences were so small. Prime Minister Wilson furthered the change in the BBC by appointing as its chairman the head of commercial television, Lord Hill.

On radio, the shift in emphasis must be ascribed to anticipatory competition. The BBC fears that the Conservative party, if it wins the next election, will allow commercial stations. It wants to preempt the field by doing all the banal things they would do.

New Kind of Water Excites Scientists

By DIETRICK E. THOMSEN

Chemists have been using water since chemistry began, but only now have they discovered a strange kind called polywater.

The new confirmation of the existence of this peculiar form of water could have tremendous impact not only on chemistry but on many other fields, ranging from human biology to weather prediction.

The polywater exists now only in minute laboratory quantities — but the scientists who made it believe large-scale production is likely. And it may also exist in nature — unnoticed over the centuries.

If it does, it may play a role in a number of processes of basic concern to scientists. It may take part in the production of rain, snow and fog; the formation of clay, even the actions of human membranes. "The stuff is still water, but in the form of a polymer — hence the name."

A polymer is a giant molecule, formed when a large number of molecules of some substance are forced by temperature and pressure to string themselves together in long chains. So, for example, ester molecules can be made to string themselves together into polyesters — plastics.

Proof Reported

Now a group of scientists from the University of Maryland and the National Bureau of Standards, Dr. Ellis R. Lippincott, Dr. Robert R. Stromberg, Dr. Warren H. Grant and Gerald L. Cessac, reports proof of the polywater.

The present work grows out of reports by some Russian chemists, notably Drs. N. N. Polyakin and B. V. Deryagin, who said that water condensed in tiny glass tubes showed strange properties. It has lower vapor pressure than ordinary water and higher viscosity. It solidifies at minus 40 degrees C. and forms a glassy solid rather than crystalline ice. It can be up to 1.4 times as dense as ordinary water, and maintains its molecular structure to temperatures as high as 500 degrees C.

The Russian work aroused interest in both Europe and the United States, and several groups have looked for the peculiar water. Some have found it; others have claimed that they could not and attributed the properties observed by the Russians to some impurity in the samples.

The Maryland-NBS scientists say that not only have they been able to make polywater with the strange properties, but they also have been able to subject it to spectroscopic studies. "The evidence is overwhelming that it's authentic and not an impurity or surface phenomenon," says Dr. Lippincott.

New Spectrum

To make sure, they compared its spectrum with those of 100,000 other substances, stored in a computer memory. "It is not a spectrum of any known substance," they conclude.

The possibility of forming such water leads to the suggestion that other substances containing oxygen-hydrogen groups may form similar polymers. Condensation of similarly straggled acetone, methanol and acetic acid has been reported from Russia. At Maryland, says Dr. Lippincott, "we have prepared and characterized some other materials." But this part of the work is still in a preliminary stage.

"It seems unbelievable," says Dr. Lippincott, "that water like this hasn't been found before. For two or three hundred years it was never picked up." But he points out that the chemical literature of the past shows indications that some researchers may have come upon polywater without realizing what it was. "Prof. (Walter A.) Patrick of Johns Hopkins," says Dr. Lippincott, "said that the vapor pressure of water in tiny tubes was not right. Prof. (J. Leon) Shereshevsky at Howard came out with the flat statement that water in such tubes didn't obey the laws."

But now that polywater has definitely been identified, says Dr. Lippincott, "the whole concept is going to shake things up."

Children need to be treated as individuals in a learning experience that grows more complex, more concentrated, every day. How large are the classes in your schools? Experts say that in the important elementary years particularly, the pupil/teacher ratio must not exceed 25-1. Does your area measure up to this? Or is your child being short-changed like thousands of others in B.C. In the election ... support the candidate who supports Better Education in B.C.

Bill WALKER

VANCOUVER — The Prince is fine and he's going to spend the rest of the summer at the beach.

That's the word from Johnny Longden, trainer of Kentucky Derby winner Majestic Prince and a visitor here at the weekend.

Longden was here for the fourth running of the Johnny Longden "6,000", an event commemorating his riding victory of that number aboard Prince Scorpion in 1965.

He was here also to meet with industrialist Frank McMahon, by whom he is employed as a horse trainer, and with whom he had spent a few days earlier in the month, horse-shopping in Kentucky.

He was also here hopefully to decorate as the winner of his race, one of two McMahon-owned and Longden-trained horses which were the prohibitive favorites.

Regarding The Prince, Longden was emphatic.

"He's fine," he said. "The operation was a complete success and he should be ready for the four-year-old campaign early in the new year."

"He's feeling, so good it takes two men to walk him." The Prince had been "fired" for what is tantamount to a calcium deposit in the ankles, and is now undergoing a recuperative program.

About the future, Longden was confident.

"You should see him run some big ones again," he said. Later he said he was pointing, primarily for the Santa Anita Maternity, the Santa Anita Handicap and the San Juan Capistrano.

Regarding what had gone before with The Prince — the victories in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, followed by the disappointment of the Belmont, Longden still is practically non-committal.

He took the view that what had been, had been, and was faulting no one. The closest he That's where the beach comes in.

Following the Hollywood Park meeting, the Longden stable was shipped to Del Mar and The Prince was included because, as Johnny said: "I want to get him out on the beach."

The theory is that walking in the surf and ankle deep in the sand will hasten the recovery period and strengthen the affected parts.

This type of training is not new, as it actually is a part of the Del Mar scene with an underground passage leading from the stable area to the beach. Excellent results have been attained in the past, particularly in the case of St. Vincent and Colorado King.

has ever come on that score to criticizing jockey Bill Hartack for losing the Belmont was when he said: "...he let The Prince get away from him coming out of the gate..."

Others were less kind to Hartack at that time, but as Longden can point to with pride is the fact that Majestic Prince has had only nine races, won eight of them and finished second once. You can't knock the record.

The calcium find following the Belmont would not have materially affected the Prince's performance, knowledgeable horsemen have said.

Meanwhile at the track on this day there was a meeting of the minds — McMahon, Johnny L., and his son Vance who trains the Ex-Park stable for his father.

And the talk probably centered around that recent trip to Kentucky where McMahon shelled out $220,000 at the annual yearling sales. This is only $30,000 less than he paid for Majestic Prince two years ago, but this time he got three yearlings with a Never-Bend colt topping the list at $100,000.

There was another trip, too, to Spendthrift Farms, where Majestic Prince was foaled. And the object of the attention there was a six-month-old colt that is a full brother to the Prince. Although McMahon's partner in the purchase of the three yearlings has not been disclosed, he does share ownership of the Prince's full brother with Spendthrift Farms breeder Leslie Coombs.

The comment: "A good-looking colt, but we don't know if he can run, yet."

Longden, who arrived relatively late on Saturday, looked pale, and it was doubtful for a time on Friday if he would come since he had been suffering from the flu.

And then the fact that his powerful entry of Regal Jingle and Bright Monarch failed to appear in the winner's circle didn't improve his disposition, or allow for any exodus of McMahons and Longdens from the mezzanine box, an unusual fact in itself.

But there was some consolation, however small.

For when Longden rode his 6,000th winner aboard Prince Scorpion in 1965, he rode for Evergood Stables.

Saturday, the winner of the Longden "6,000" was Westbury Road.

The owner: Evergood Stables, Art Fouks, et al.

Bates Puts Lock On Softball Title

Bate Construction has "made it". Powered by the ready bat of Harvey Stevenson, Bate clinched the Major Men's Softball League pennant Monday with a 6-4 victory over Luckies at Central Park.

Bates now are six games ahead of Molsons, with five games remaining in the regular-season schedule for both clubs. Stevenson, in the midst of a hot hitting spree, drove in four runs with singles in the first and third innings as well as a two-run homer in the fifth. He walked in his only other appearance at the plate.

Gord Huston struck out 10 batters but gave up nine hits, including home runs by Stu Mitchell and Gord Jones, while pitching the victory.

'Still Champ?' Charge Brings Court Action

BOLOGNA, Italy (AP) — Nino Benvenuti, world middle-weight boxing champion, is involved in a court battle with a sports writer who questioned Nino's claim to the crown.

Benvenuti Still Champion? was the headline over an article written June 26 by Nando Pensa in a Milanese newspaper. Pensa suggested that those in the boxing world who count consider Nigerian Dick Tiger the champ. Benvenuti filed a complaint against Pensa Monday alleging defamation of professional standing. The head of the Bologna police investigative squad relayed the complaint to Milan for legal action.

Benvenuti dropped a 10-round non-title fight to Tiger in New York in May. He suffered a broken finger on his right hand during the fight.

Doctors said Monday Benvenuti's finger was healing well and that he would have no trouble resuming his ring career.

Streak Hitters Tough in Clutch

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vada Pinson and Billy Williams proved their worth Monday when the chips were down. Pinson ran his hitting streak to 19 games with a fourth-inning single then came up with the deciding hit and saving defensive play in St. Louis Cardinals' 2-1 victory over San Diego Padres.

Williams also singled in the fourth, for a 17-game hitting streak, before stroking the winning single in a two-run 10th-inning rally that sent Chicago Cubs past San Francisco Giants 4-3 in the day's only other game.

Pinson matched the NL's season-high hitting streaks, shared by Pittsburgh's Matty Alou and Willie Stargell, with his fourth-inning single, then doubled to score Julian Javier in the sixth and gave St. Louis a 2-0 lead.

Cardinals' rookie Chuck Taylor blanked the Padres until the eighth, when they scored on an error by Javier, an infield hit by Ed Spezio and a double by Roberto Pena.

PLAY KILLS RALLY
An intentional walk filled the bases with one out, but Pinson gloved Nate Colbert's foul fly down the right field line and fired to the plate to nail pinch runner John Spin, completing a rally-killing double play.

Javier cracked a leadoff homer off loser Dick Kelley in the first inning and singled ahead of Pinson's RBI double in the sixth, helping Taylor gain his third victory without a loss.

Juan Marichal walked pinch hitter Willie Smith with two out in the 10th, and Don Kessinger, Glenn Beckert and Williams followed with singles, giving the Cubs their first Wrigley Field victory over the Giants' ace in five years.

The Giants overcame a 2-0 deficit on Willie McCovey's two-run homer off Bill Harris in the eighth and took a 3-2 lead in the top of the 10th on Willie Mays' run-scoring single.

Ron Santo drilled a two-run homer for the Cubs before McCovey's 31st circuit sent the game into overtime.

The victory increased the Cubs' Eastern Division lead over second-place New York Mets to five games.

Cordova Bay Best in South

Cordova Bay blanked Esquimalt 12-0 to win the Lower Island juvenile boys softball championship at Bullen Park.

Both finalists will enter the Island championships this weekend in Nanaimo.

ABSENT MANAGER ...

Leo Playing Hookey?

CHICAGO (AP) — Manager Leo Durocher, apparently AWOL from the Chicago Cubs dugout over the weekend, is going to explain the matter to ruffled owner P. K. Wrigley.

Leo left the dugout Saturday as the Cubs were playing Los Angeles Dodgers, because of a reported stomach disorder. He didn't show up again until Monday when the Cubs took the field against San Francisco Giants.

Sunday was Leo's 63rd birthday. He won't admit his age, let alone what he was doing away from the Cub helm.

The Cubs edged the Dodgers

3-2 in 11 innings Saturday but were rocked 6-2 by them Sunday.

"This is a private matter and I don't discuss my private life with anyone," Leo fumed on his return. "If I have anything to say I'll say it to Mr. Wrigley."

One Chicago newspaper reported that Leo, spent Saturday at Camp Ojibwa near Eagle River, Wis., attending a reception in honor of parents' weekend with his bride, who has two sons enrolled there.

The paper also quoted Wrigley as saying: "I was told Leo was sick. I had no idea he wasn't confined to his home. I feel Leo owes an apology to management and all the players and coaches."

"You can't run a ship without a rudder," Wrigley said he would meet Leo today.

"Leo can do anything he wants," said Wrigley. "But the way he did it seems to have left everything hanging. If he had told the club what it was all about everything would have been fine."

"The players are busting a boiler to win. I don't like to see such upsetting things happen. We don't want anything to disrupt the spirit of this ball club."

Open Victory Helps Aaron Shed Stigma

Golf's Also-Ran Finally Makes It By Defeating Snead in Playoff

MONTREAL (CP) — Tommy Aaron has joined golf's establishment.

He's finally shed the stigma of the perennial also-ran by winning a tournament.

The tall, 32-year-old from Calaway Gardens, Ga., made it to the winner's circle Monday after a nine-year wait, winning the Canadian open championship and the Seagram Gold Cup by two strokes in an 18-hole playoff round with veteran Sam Snead, 25 years his senior.

"I guess you won't talk about the fact I've never won one now," Aaron gently chided newsmen. "You'll probably quit writing about me because there's nothing unique about me now. I've become one of the guys. I've won one."

Aaron shot a two-under-par 70 over the Pinegrove Golf Club layout while Snead had to settle for a par-72.

PSYCHOLOGICAL BOOST

His victory was a big one financially as well as psychologically. He won $25,000 to Snead's $14,300 and added $4,500 as his share of the gate.

Snead also picked up $4,500 additional money from gate receipt of $18,000 from the estimated 3,000-strong gallery. Fifty per cent of playoff gates are assigned to the golfers involved with the Royal Canadian Golf Association and the host club equally splitting the other 50 per cent.

The pair had finished the regulation 72-hole round Sunday with identical 13-under-par 275 scores, with Aaron setting a course record with an eight-under 64 in the fourth round to catch Snead.

The veteran had held a six-stroke lead over Aaron entering Sunday's round. Aaron had registered eight second-place finishes since turning pro in 1960, but had never been able to better those performances.

DID IT IN STYLE

However, he did his first victory up in style. Leading by one stroke going into the 18th, Aaron guided in a 25-foot putt for an eagle three, while Snead had his eagle attempt from 40 feet miss by less than an inch and slide four feet beyond the cup. He birdied the hole, but only after the excitement caused by Aaron's effort had died down.

Aaron said he considered himself lucky to beat the wily Snead. They played together in the first and second rounds.

"In the first and second rounds I didn't feel I was playing good," Aaron said. "And until yesterday (Sunday) I didn't think I'd played well throughout."

He said luck was with him on the fifth hole where "I made a real long putt (75 feet) and really used the putter like a driver from the very front of the green."

"I was surprised when it dropped in."

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

Snead said he didn't think anyone would catch him after he'd rattled home with a five-stroke lead after three rounds.

"I didn't think anybody would catch me unless I fell apart and the roof fell in, or somebody went crazy and burned up the course," said Snead who previously won the Canadian title in 1938, 1940 and 1941.

Snead got off to a poor start Monday when he went one-over for a six on the par-five, 600-yard first hole. Aaron parred that one, but the second saw the situation reversed.

They traded birdies on the third and the veteran moved one stroke up on the fourth, only to have Aaron pull his 75-foot birdie putt on the fifth and then get another on the ninth to lead by one stroke at the half-way point.

Aaron was out in a two-under 34 and Snead 35.

However the tide changed as Aaron was one-over-par on the next three holes and Snead went par-par and then one-over, to take a one-stroke lead.

AARON CATCHES UP

Aaron evened it up on 14 and then went one up on the next hole when he birdied the short, par-three 15th. Both hit par on 16 and 17 to set the scene for Aaron's eagle finish.

The winner said he felt at the time he had lost the tournament with his troubles on the first three holes of the back nine.

"But I thought I'd just keep trying."

Snead complained of having had 25 puts fall short throughout the five rounds.

"But I've been putting short for 10 years and it feels like somebody grabbing hold of me when I putt," Snead said. "I gave it a charge at 18 but it didn't work."

TEE TOPICS

By Ernie Fedoruk

The television cameras gave Vaughan Trapp a long look, and Oak Bay's touring professional also was made welcome in the banking department after Sunday's final shots in the Canadian Open.

And, though he didn't make it into the living room, Bill Wakeham, Victoria's other tourist, also came on strong.

They made an excellent showing in the big event. Trapp's 69-70-75-74—288 was worth $1,560, plus change. Wakeham earned $700, and change, for his 76-70-75-70—291 performance. Among the Canadians, Trapp finished fourth and Wakeham seventh.

Both might have fared much better but for a few rough stretches. Vaughan, five under after 39 holes, hit his in the third round and at the start of the fourth. Wakeham met his during the first and second rounds.

Wakeham would just as soon forget the first five holes. He started bogey, double bogey, bogey, bogey, bogey... six over after five holes!

Surprisingly, Wakeham was more disappointed with his second-round, two-under 70 than he was with the 75 the following day when winds and rain hit the Montreal course. On the Friday round, Wakeham was five under after 16 holes. He three-putted the 17th, from 25 feet, for a bogey, then took a double-bogey seven on the easy 18th.

"I hit a good drive," said Wakeham, "then a good second to the 18th. It was heading straight for the flag, but ticked a branch and deflected into the river..."

Otherwise, Wakeham could have finished with a 67 or 68. Both headed for the Alberta Open in Calgary, starting with the pro-am Wednesday, in high spirits.

Wakeham also is elated with the fact that he has finished in the money in six of his last eight tournaments. In that stretch, Wakeham has pocketed approximately $3,265.

Both figure to do better when they get "home." Specifically, to the CPGA tournament at Vancouver's Point Grey (Aug. 8-10) and the B.C. Open at Uplands (Aug. 15-17).

Bouquets also are in order for Victoria's Dave Mick and Carl Schwantje. The two have been selected to B.C.'s junior team along with Doug Roxburgh and Ken Carlson of Vancouver.

It marks Mick's second straight appearance on the team, and the second straight time Victoria has been represented by two players.

Junior honors also were bestowed on Keith Burrell of Uplands, who will line up with a four-member "B" team for B.C.'s annual match with Alberta.

Roxburgh defeated Mick but Schwantje, Dave McCall and Rob Ferguson all carved out singles victories Sunday in the annual inter-city series at Quilchena. Vancouver's 10-man team won that round, 8½-6½, and the return match will be played next Sunday at Colwood, starting at 11:30 a.m.

Schwantje led Sunday's scorers with a par 72 while McCall checked in with a 73.

SHORT PUTTS: Charlie Thom, on the 15th, and Jack Stuart, on the 7th, both clicked for aces at the weekend to run Colwood's total to six within the past month... And that just about matches the entire hole-in-one output of the previous three years... Also clicking for a hole-in-one—his third in two years—was Cedar Hill member Phil Schulz, on the 6th... Colwood members showed up strongly on home grounds to defeat Marine Drive 45-15 in their inter-club meeting Sunday... Brian Gandy served up a two-under 63 to lead Cedar Hill's juniors to a 5-4 victory over their elders, and possession of the Jack Croft Memorial Trophy.

Bob Bell, Don Billsborough and John Wren stand up as teachers Friday (6 p.m.) when the first in a series of caddy clinics is held at Uplands... It's all part of the preparations for the B.C. Open.

Gorge Throttled By Independents

English Roll To Easy Win

LONDON (Reuters) — Derek Underwood led England to a comfortable 230-run victory over New Zealand with a brilliant bowling display on Monday, fourth day of the first of the three-match test cricket series.

It was a remarkable comeback for England, scuttled for only 190 runs in the first innings. Underwood, a slow left-arm, finished with seven wickets for 32 runs as New Zealand slumped for the second time against the potent English attack and was out for 131 runs.

Losers managed only 169 runs in their first innings and couldn't stop the English batsmen in the second innings before yielding 340 runs.

At Dover: Sussex beat Hampshire 105 and 136; Sussex 209 and 35 for 1.

Island Victory A Family Affair

Victory turned out to be a family affair as Brentwood edged View Royal 7-6 Sunday to capture the Vancouver Island juvenile girls' softball championship at View Royal Park.

Noreen Slugettag singled in sister Marilyn for the winning run in the last inning.

Gorge Hotel played errorless ball but failed to take advantage of five independent miscues and dropped a 5-4 Senior Amateur Baseball League decision Monday at Royal Athletic Park.

Independents were leading 5-0 by the top of the fourth inning before Gorge rallied for three runs in the fifth.

Gorge Brice stepped in to halt a final Gorge rally in the bottom of the seventh inning with one out, a run in, and two men on base.

Brice, taking over from starter Bob Stuart, got Bob Lumley to force a second out, walked Tony Cosier and then struck out George Holt with the bases loaded.

Tony Gage paced Independents at the plate with a home run while Craig Lawrence drove in two runs.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

Hampton Tosses Knockout Punch

Triangle became the first team to bow out of the District Little League baseball tournament at Hampton Park after losing 8-3 to Hampton on Monday.

The result leaves three teams in the round-robin, double-loss elimination playoffs which will determine a Victoria representative for the B.C. championships starting Aug. 3 in Whalley.

Hampton will play Lake Hill, which meets Nationals at 6:30 tonight, on Wednesday.

Singles by Dale Brouard and Glen Ormiston as well as a double by Mike Schmelt drove in three Hampton runs in the second inning.

ERRORS HURT

Triangle committed three of its six errors in the third inning to allow Hampton to add four unearned runs.

Randy Strandlund opened the inning with a single and came home on an overthrow by the catcher. Ormiston forced in a run when he was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded and another two runs came in when David Blower reached first on an error.

Frank Mosses recorded a three-hitter and lost his shutout to unearned runs.

Prolific Pace Maintained By Nanaimo

PORT ALBERNI — Nanaimo Luckies continued a massive show of power by downing Port Alberni Barclays 28-6 Monday in the second game of their best-of-five Vancouver Island Senior Lacrosse League semi-final series.

Luckies trounced Barclays 24-8 in the opener Saturday and could wrap up the series on Wednesday.

Don Stephenson paced Luckies' 83-shot attack with five goals. Barclays replied with 45 shots on goal.

Bill Russell added four goals to the Nanaimo cause, Dave Ranger and Gerry Shires each collected three, and Gerry Thompson, Jim Kipp, Larry Clarkson, Bill Clark and Steve Bishop each tallied two goals.

Single efforts were added by Murray Thomas, Ray Brennan and Don Morelli.

Barclays received three goals from Brian Van Horne and single efforts from Bob Jones, Ted Steel and Brian Baylon.

PEOPLE OF THE POTLATCH

They Celebrated by Giving Away Their Wealth

INDIAN CEREMONIAL MASK

By BEVERLY BIE
MONTREAL (CP)—From the sea the guests are arriving for the feast and the sound of the dogs' rises among the totems and spreads over the long painted houses.

Between the huge carved house posts the chief appears, a high whistle sounds—the potlatch begins.

The People of the Potlatch, named for the great ceremonial feasts at which they gave to another family all their amassed wealth of carved and painted vessels and insignia, are the coastal Indian tribes of British Columbia—the Haida, Tsimshian, Kwakiutl, Nootka, Bella Coola and Coast Salish Indians.

Their art and artifacts are displayed this summer at Man and His World's Indian Art Pavilion in an extensive series of rooms in two buildings.

The collection belongs to the University of British Columbia's Museum of Anthropology, where most of it is usually housed in a storeroom. The lack of display space.

The Montreal exhibition is the first time such a large proportion of the collection—the finest of its kind—has been shown at one time.

FILM ON CEREMONY

Four black masks, human faces at once realistic and stylized, lead to the pavilion's potlatch room where masks, totems, dishes, ladles and a film tell about this pivotal ceremony in the social life of the Northwest Indians.

In the film—made from a collection of photographs taken on the coast around 1900—the carved prows of the long canoes of the visitors arrive on the beach to be met by the chief.

He has gathered together all the family wealth, which he gives away during the feast, in order to celebrate the raising of a new totem pole or a wedding.

One of the slides shows a collection of totem poles, one of which seems unfinished—a carved face quite low on the pole is topped, not by other figures, but by stretch of log, broken only by three encircling carved rings.

Andrea Laforet, a UBC anthropology graduate on loan to the pavilion for the summer, explained that each ring indicated the holding of a potlatch, and that "this must have been a very rich chief to have had so many potlatches."

WASTE FROWNED ON

Because missionaries in the early part of this century felt the potlatch was depleting the wealth of the tribes, the government made them illegal around 1920, Miss Laforet said. This made it very difficult for the Indians to hold weddings, burials or other traditional ceremonies, even though the potlatch did continue furtively for a period.

What appears to be a miniature box car with wooden wheels, turns out to be a potlatch feast dish, carved in the shape of the mythical double-headed dragon with inverse humps, intended to hold salmon and berries for the feast.

Smaller, equally elaborately carved dishes held individual portions of food, served out of the large containers with wooden or mountain sheep horn ladles.

Carved frogs with abalone shell eyes and nostrils, and one with a set of bone teeth, held Eulachon or candle fish oil, used for everything from butter to candles.

MASKS USED

Masks, representing human, animal, bird and fish faces, including one mosquito with a stinger where his tongue should have been, were used in tribal dances. A sign in the pavilion notes:

"In the early days, birds, men, fish and animals lived each in their own worlds of earth, seas and sky, but each could change his external form by taking off his fur, scales or feathers and appear human."

"Families traced descent from these myth people, and inherited from them songs, dances, legends and masks."

"These inherited privileges were the theme of Northwest Coast life and art."

One mask is two-faced: To show the transformation from animal to man, the face of an eagle opens during the dance to disclose the face of a man.

Another pair are the sun and the moon—the moon a strange, unexpected face with painted black hair and small beard, much like Sunday school images of Christ; and perhaps a trace of missionary influence.

The Hamatsa masks, a subject of anthropological controversy, represent giant, mythical birds, some of them cannibalistic. Some say the dancer wearing the headdress took bites out of the audience and others say they didn't, or it was all arranged beforehand.

DEPLORE CANNIBALISM

In any case it was not the bubbling pot sort of cannibalism; Miss Laforet said:

"In Kwakiutl society, as in our own, the act of cannibalism was absolutely deplored and that's why there is so much terror surrounding the Hamatsa spirit."

With the coming of the Hudson's Bay Company, ceremonial robe makers began to experiment with new materials, and these show up in the buttons, sewn in spirals, squares and circles where no button holes were ever meant to be.

Jingle bells and silver thimbles rim sleeve and hemlines, and the basis of the whole effect is a Company blanket, but used by the Indian with an imagination and effect that the trader may never have had.

There are whistles, each with a different sound for the different spirits, and a soul-catcher, used by the shaman or healer to trap and return the soul of the sick man who called for help.

Most of the objects in the pavilion "were in use at the turn of the century," Miss Laforet said, though the history of the tribes goes back "thousands of years."

Older examples seldom survive because of the difficulty of preserving cedar wood.

Tariff Irks India

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—Members of both sides of the legislature Monday demanded that India quit the Commonwealth following a British decision to introduce tariffs on cotton textile imports from India in 1972. The British decision, announced Wednesday, also provoked calls for imposition by India of retaliatory tariffs on British goods.

BIGGEST NUGGET in the gold strike, Danielle Ouimet sits back and lets the money roll in. As star of Quebec film "Valerie", a celluloid sandwich of clichés and nudity, she triggered Canada's first major box office success on a shoestring budget.

Panned Film a Goldmine Of Cliches and Skin

TORONTO (CP) — Valerie, a made-in-Quebec film punctuated with nude scenes, was panned by Toronto reviewers but applauded for its financial success.

"Valerie is not the film that points the way to cinematic greatness in Canada," said Kasper Dzegeze of the Globe and Mail, "but it is among the first to show that nothing stands between a Canadian production and successful box office but the many layers of artistic pretensions that have afflicted other native efforts."

ABREAST OF TIMES
"Good breast presentation may not be good art but it's sure good business," said Bernadette Andrews of the Telegram.

The film, directed by Denis Heroux and starring Danielle Ouimet, opened here last week. The production was made on an $85,000 budget and producers expect it to gross about $1,000,000.

The Star gave the movie the least attention and The Globe and Mail was the most complimentary.

VROOM AT THE TOP
The Star carried a report on a promotional reception early in July and let the opening later in the month pass without notice. Martin Kneiman said Miss Ouimet does not lack "vroom-vroom" but said conditions at the reception were not suitable for review purposes.

The Globe and Mail said: "It's about time that the Canadian movie industry produced a film like Valerie."

"Valerie isn't necessarily the film that director Denis Heroux wanted to make, but the financial success of this production has now freed Heroux to make two more films, more in keeping with his own wishes."

CORNY CLICHES
The Globe and Mail said Heroux tells the story of Valerie, a young girl who runs away from a convent school, in "a direct, craftsmanlike fashion." Valerie is drawn into prostitution and the movie eventually has a happy ending as she marries a painter. "As for the story, take 35 corny film clichés and string them loosely together with some nude scenes and you've got yourself a Valerie."

Aged Swingers Keen On Old Variety Acts

TORONTO (CP) — The Fudger Home Follies is a variety show with a difference. For one thing, the singer in the opening act of this annual Toronto performance has 43 great-grandchildren.

The cast, all residents of the Fudger Home for the Aged, range in age from 65 to 93 years.

Interest among the residents is so strong the show's producer, arts and crafts director Roy Passano, plans to expand into Little Theatre productions.

In the first performance of the Follies, the cast ignored paralysed limbs, arthritis and assorted ills to sing old ballads, perform vaudeville humor acts and playlets.

David Stephen sat in his wheel chair with an arm in a sling and a leg braced, cracking jokes in Gleason and Hope style. A former concert singer, 65-year-old Edith Ogden, revealed her professional voice still intact by singing Beautiful Lady.

Florence Ward, 80, strutted across the stage with a cane and knapsack, leading the audience in The Happy Wanderer.

RECALLS WAR DAYS
Isabel Gray, who comes from the "Pearly People" district of London, England, performed a skit with Mr. Passano depicting an air raid shelter scene from the Second World War days.

Off-stage, 72-year-old Albert McKenzie, a former mining engineer from Cobalt, Ont., accompanied on the piano and Flora Vermelen, 80, stood for 70 minutes at the lighting control panel.

The show had a professional touch with a well-known former radio personality as master of ceremonies. "Slim" Freckleton, a Toronto radio disc jockey for 27 years, exhibited a still smooth voice reciting Albert and the Lion and telling stories during costume changes.

The spirit of the cast was told best by the oldest performer, 93-year-old Alice Whiting. In a one-liner, she said "Remember the kettle is up to its neck in boiling water all the time, but still sings."

Princess Likes Rum

TORBAY, England (Reuters) —Princess Anne tried a tot of rum with sailors when she toured a British battleship Monday. On the quarter-deck the 18-year-old princess watched the morning rum issue and was persuaded to try a tot. She took a small sip and liked the taste, but said she didn't think she could manage the whole glass.

Composer Loesser Dead

NEW YORK (AP) — Composer-producer Frank Loesser, who wrote words and music for the stage musicals Guys and Dolls, The Most Happy Fella and How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, died Monday at Mount Sinai Hospital. He was 68.

He won early fame with songs written for U.S. Army shows during the Second World War, including Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition and What Do You Do in the Infantry.

His song, Baby It's Cold Outside, from the film Neptune's Daughter, won the 1948 Academy Award. How to Succeed won the Pulitzer Prize for drama in 1961.

Buildup Foreseen For Esquimalt Base

Alberta Cutbacks May Benefit Here

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Defence department cuts are not expected to affect bases in Greater Victoria, sources close to the government said today.

It has been suggested that army and navy bases in Esquimalt will likely be reinforced.

Major bases in Calgary and Lethbridge are likely to get "the deep six." The benefit of cutbacks there could be felt here.

The Times was told, "The situation is not cutting down at Esquimalt, but consideration for expanding its role."

The civil service—federal, provincial and local—plus the military is the most important basic industry in Greater Victoria, a local economic report said last week.

Military and civilian personnel in this area account for 48 per cent of employment, although there has been a decline since 1961. The federal sector accounts for 14.5 per cent of the 48 per cent.

The report said, however, that there is no evidence the federal government will substantially increase its civilian or military labor force locally.

The military labor force has declined from 6,217 in 1961 to 4,702 in 1967, reflecting the decline in the size of armed forces in Canada.

Defence Payrolls Up Slightly

Despite the decline in military and civilian employees in the defence area, the total value of defence payrolls has increased slightly in the same period.

The military bases include the Work Point barracks and the west coast navy base as well as the dockyard.

Eighteen months ago, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said the long-time army base would be phased out.

But one source said today it has since become obvious that the minister "spoke out of turn."

In Ottawa, informed sources said the closure of several defence department bases—to be announced within two weeks—will be staggered over a period of years.

In this way, the economic impact of the closures is expected to be eased.

Reports that up to 15 bases in Canada will get the chop were discounted last week by Cadieux as an exaggeration. It was understood that about half that number would be closer to the truth.

In addition, however, a number of bases will be cut down in size. The closures and reductions are part of a government program to keep defence expenditures at the current level of $1.8 billion for the next three years.

MOTHERS BAND TO GIVE MILK

A group of Victoria mothers who support breast feeding of babies have helped a sick baby in Vancouver with an intolerance to cows' milk.

They are members of La Leche League—the name means milk in Spanish. It is a world-wide organization which believes in "good mothering through breast feeding."

The three-month-old Vancouver boy had been breast fed, but his mother stopped. A severe skin condition then developed.

Nine mothers in Vancouver, members of the La Leche League chapter there, contributed milk for the baby but this was not enough.

A call for help went out to Victoria league members who sent over 30 ounces, or one day's supply, at the weekend.

Asked if there will be further donations from Victoria mothers, local La Leche League chapter leader Mrs. Tom Rowbottom said "if they ask we will be ready."

We're Cleaning Our Own Nest Says BCFP

Southern Vancouver Island's largest industrial employer today listed the 11 steps already taken to hold air, water and noise pollution to a minimum.

B.C. Forests Products, with an annual payroll in excess of $26 million, (tourist income in the area is estimated at around $10 million) and employing 2,900 workers, admitted "perhaps what we haven't done is to properly inform the public in Victoria as to what has and what is being accomplished."

The statement was contained in a letter to Ald. Cecil Parrott who had requested full details of the total B.C. Forest Products anti-pollution program.

The company lists five steps in an air pollution control program ranging from the hiring of smoke control consultants to closed circuit television cameras.

NEW EQUIPMENT
The consultant, B. H. Leviston and Associates, is investigating new equipment and processes to reduce smoke.

The television camera keeps an eye on smoke stacks to ensure that the company operates within the City of Victoria smoke bylaw.

A claim that "almost half of what one sees coming from the stacks is water vapor" is repeated.

Company officials told Parrott

that research to find new economic ways of using lower-grade waste material is continuing.

"Hemlock sawdust is now going to our pulp mill at Crofton, wet bark is being used to cover garbage at the Hartland Road dump and fir bark is being mixed with seaweed to produce a fertilizer by an independent company in Victoria," the report states.

Four methods of water pollution control are listed by the company: log booms to control floating debris; the removal of debris; a continuing harbor clean-up program; and installation of a $250,000 dry barker to eliminate discharge of foam and discolored water.

LESS NOISE

To minimize noise near large mills the company says mufflers have been added to air cylinder exhausts, signal lights and electric buzzers have replaced air horns and buildings have been closed in.

Parrott said although much remained to be done, he is satisfied the company is making a strenuous effort to eliminate pollution.

The company operates plants at Victoria, Crofton and Youbou and logging operations at Cayce, Port Renfrew, Koksilah, Sooke and Muir Creek on the west coast.

'AFRICAN' MUSIC COOLS OFFICIALS

Rock Concerts Drummed Out

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen said today outdoor rock concerts will probably be prohibited in residential or downtown areas in future.

Ald. Cecil Parrott said if they are to be held at all they should be held inside an arena and during the afternoon. The mayor said Friday's rock concert—three bands and an audience of nearly 2,000 in Royal Athletic Park—had taught council a couple of things:

"Rock music is noisy and most people don't like it."

And, "things young people like to do conflict violently with older people's tastes. The result is friction."

At least 40 people phoned police to complain about the music Friday night. Some lived as far away as Oak Bay and Gonzales Point.

"I hate the music myself, but all young people seem to like it," said Stephen.

So they can have an outlet and some fun without disturbing too many older people, future concerts should be "in isolated areas." The mayor suggested Elk or Beaver Lakes where "they could make their noise to their hearts' content."

Except for the noise and one band member who "contemptuously disobeyed orders" and urged young people to sit on the grass, the crowd was controlled.

The mayor said there was little doubt but "when you get 2,000 young people out and that music gets them stirred up you are never quite sure where it's going to end."

Stephen outlined the municipal politician's dilemma in things like the rock concert. You don't want to appear an ogre and against fun, he said, but at the same time you don't want a riot or hundreds of angry taxpayers on your hands.

Deputy Police Chief Ray Maitland said except for one incident—and of course the noise—everything was orderly.

"But I guess the African music works them up to a frenzy," he said. "Some of them got all worked up and started ripping down a fence."

Ald. Parrott feels he is being made to look like an ogre and denied today having given the order to stop the music.

Parrott said he has received insulting calls from young people calling him an ogre but has received even more calls of support from people offended by the noise.

Parrott emphasized that neither he nor council is against young people but stated he opposes too much noise.

"We had no idea what kind of noise this was going to make," he said.

City Broke Deal, Says Promoter

Rock concert promoter Paul Watson, 23, said there was nothing in a contract he had with the city that required his Friday night show to end at 11 p.m.

And he said the contract made no reference to staying off the grass at Royal Athletic park.

Watson was criticized for not ending the concert at 11 p.m. The contract stated, however, that Watson had use of Royal Athletic park until 11:30 p.m.

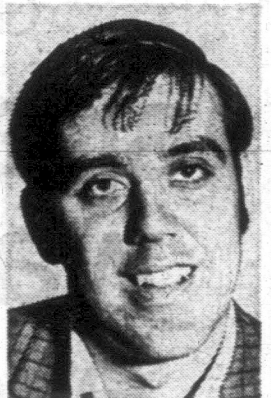

Watson said if anybody broke the contract it was the city. The contract called for city provision of electricity for the bands until 11:30 p.m. City officials cut it off at 11:25 p.m. Friday.

As for the turf in the park, Watson said he made an agreement with one city official that, if the stands became too crowded, spectators could sit on the grass.

Ald. Cecil M. Parrott and Mayor Hugh Stephen said Watson was told that no one was to walk on the newly-seeded area.

Watson, a University of Victoria student who lives at 3127 Rutledge, said he will organize another rock concert for this winter.

"But this time it will be inside."

Grit Lawyer Seeks Saanich Nomination

Oak Bay lawyer Louis Lindholm is among several Liberals planning to contest the nomination for Saanich and the Islands riding.

The nomination meeting for Saanich Thursday at Royal Oak Elementary school is one of four Liberal nomination meetings in the Greater Victoria area this week.

Along with Lindholm there are "two or three others" expected to seek the nomination said Patrick Palmer, president of the Esquimalt-Saanich federal Liberal association.

Palmer said some of these candidates may announce their intention at tonight's Oak Bay riding Liberal nomination meeting at the Oak Bay municipal hall at 8 p.m.

Allan Cox, who won the Oak Bay seat in a 1968 byelection, is expected to be unopposed at tonight's nominating meeting.

In Esquimalt riding there are two candidates, Fred Boulter, 808 Brock, and Frederick H. Phillips, 309 Sabina. Phillips, credit union manager for CFB and Esquimalt, announced his candidacy at a coffee party Monday.

The Esquimalt riding nomination will be held Wednesday at Fraser Street Hall.

Mystery still surrounds the Liberal hopefuls in Victoria riding.

The Victoria riding association will choose two candidates Friday at The Inn, 1528 Cook.

Radar Technician Oak Bay NDP Choice

Twenty-eight-year-old radar technician Jack McKenzie was nominated to run for the New Democratic party in Oak Bay Monday.

"We can increase the number of NDP votes," he said.

Increasing the NDP votes is admitted as the only goal of the New Democrats in traditionally Liberal Oak Bay.

While party campaigners insist winds of political change are blowing across provincial ridings this year, they see barely a hint of a breeze in Oak Bay.

McKenzie says his chances of winning the vote are less than slim.

A combined campaign for Oak Bay and Victoria is being waged by the NDP and they make no secret that it is concentrated on toppling the two Sores cabinet ministers in Victoria ridings.

To do so NDP candidates Peter Bunn and Philip Fawcett will have to defeat Public Works Minister W. N. Chant and Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce Minister Waldo Skilling.

Of the $8,000 budgeted for the dual campaign, $6,000 will go toward the fight in Victoria.

McKenzie is taking his first political campaign seriously and will work full-time on door-to-door canvassing in Oak Bay.

He won the nomination in a two-way contest with retired

United Church minister Harold Allen, a veteran NDP-CCF campaigner.

NOT SO MANY YEARS ago, the typical high school student turned loose for the summer was content to make do on an allowance from his or her parents. But John Atcheson of Canada Manpower has found that the present teen-age crop is better blessed with initiative, and much more anxious to make a buck.

A federal employment service Youth Squad of carefully-selected high school students is helping it do so by bringing job and young applicant together.

July employment figures won't be on hand until early next month and even when available, they will tell only part of the story. This is because much of the work that the kids do is not the payroll variety.

But in the way of casual employment, manpower public relations officer and secretariat Atcheson tells me, you name it and the chances are that you'll find them working at it.

The Youth Squad, for which one student was chosen from each high school, has steered its peers to tree-felling, lawn-cutting and baby-sitting jobs. You'll find others picking berries these warm days, although that work source isn't expected to last much longer.

It's very hard for younger students to find regular employment. However, some high school seniors, either through Youth Squad liaison or on their own push, are spending the tourist season as bus boys, chambermaids and waitresses.

Car washing and service station chores give still others a chance to earn those eagerly-sought dollars.

In total, says John Atcheson, the employment picture is much the same as last year's where high-schoolers are concerned. And as usual, Victoria's "retirement industry" provides a good deal of the casual employment available for the sub-university bunch.

The university student, whose summer break begins almost two months earlier and lasts longer, is more likely to get a better break from the outfit with a season's work to bestow.

But the real rub comes later, when young men and women set out to look for full-time employment in a home area that is heavy on charm but light on industry.

Some find their niche here. But the off-Island drain continues year by year.

Ask the Times

Q. Where did Garry oaks originate and where else do they grow?

A. Garry oaks are native to this coast and grow only on Vancouver Island with one or two patches along the Fraser River. They are small trees with twisted trunks and grow on cliff-like areas.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve consumer or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Arthur Mayse...

Hemorrhage Puts Waldo Back in Bed

Waldo Skillings is back in Royal Jubilee hospital with a recurrence of internal hemorrhaging after a fall he took at the Union Club July 5.

Jubilee administrator Dr. A. C. Pickles said today the Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce minister is in "very satisfactory" condition.

"He probably will have to remain under observation at the hospital for another seven to 10 days," said Pickles.

Skillings was released from hospital Tuesday and readmitted early Saturday when the hemorrhaging began. He left the hospital July 15 to attend his nomination meeting where he was again chosen to contest the Aug. 27 election in Victoria riding.

their thinking rather odd, to say the least.

The lady encloses the reply she got from MSA's Vancouver headquarters. Here's one of its two sentences... but better take a long breath before reading:

"While people generally, medical doctors in particular, see the advantages of and recommend periodic checkups and a wide range of preventative medicine, nevertheless we understand that world economy and even the economy of our affluent society cannot yet afford utopia in health matters, realizing that this medical utopia would rapidly exhaust the medical manpower available and realizing as well that people generally would not be willing to pay the increased premium necessary to finance the operation."

Content aside—and I don't think much of that—the above is an excellent sample of marathon officialdom.

Seventy-six words, I make it, from start to period!

VICTORIA RECREATION committee member Mike Griffin has lambasted the promoters of last Friday's rock concert for contract-breaking. But no official word has yet been spoken about the disgraceful episode that ended the electronic jamboree.

I refer to the blackening of Athletic Park that left an estimated 2,000 young people to stumble and grope their way to the exits.

To call the stunt arbitrary and fat-headed isn't enough. It was a highly dangerous expedient, and it could all too easily have brought serious injury or even death to some of those concert-goers.

It could also have placed the city in a most unenviable position when the damage claims began to tumble in.

I think that Victoria City Council would do well to investigate that dousing of the lights—not excluding Ald. Cecil M. Parrott's reported part in the affair—and deliver stern censure where due.

Fan Frees Hallway Of Summer Swelter

By PENNY SAVER

"Could you put your finger on that knot?" asked Jayne.

I did as she requested and promptly had my finger squished by the wrapping ribbon, pulled tight by her enthusiastic knotting techniques.

"Sorry about that," she murmured as I wiggled my finger free. "Now all I have to do is add the bow and it will be finished."

"Wad ish ik?" I asked through a mouthful of throbbing index finger.

"An unbirthday present for my husband," she replied. "He has been complaining like mad about the lack of air conditioning in his office, so I brought him a little desk fan."

She found the little fan when she went searching for a large one to encourage circulation in the central sections of their house, namely the hall which, by some trick of fate, is completely divorced from any air currents in the rooms themselves.

On hot days the hall just sat and sweltered, a long thin Black Hole of Calcutta between the kitchen and the bedroom.

The fans Jayne found ranged from $8.95 for the small desk model she bought her husband to $24.95 for a monster with blue blades and a white plastic guard. There was a medium-sized model in the same style for $17.95.

The little fan sits on a chrome stand and has a chrome guard around the blades. It is nine inches tall at the most.

Variety of Funnels

The larger fans are good for having around children because the plastic guard is very close-set. Jayne and I were trying to figure out whether the fan was all plastic or whether the blades were enameled metal, and we had a terrible time trying to inch something through to tap the blades.

When I went back to Jayne's to see how her husband liked his gift, both were in the back yard bending over a can of lawn mower fuel with concerned expressions.

"What's the problem?" I asked. "Grass," replied Jayne. "Somehow a great clump of grass has got inside the can of gas and we are trying to decide what to do."

They eventually got a monster funnel—and strained the grass out of the gas. The funnel they used costs $2.45 and is made of blue plastic. It comes with three circular filters of different fineness and is close to a foot in diameter and over six inches deep.

"Funnels," commented Jayne as the lawn mower coughed its acceptance of the filtered fuel, "come in an amazing variety of shapes and sizes. That one is recommended for farms and industries filling airplane engines and stuff."

"But funnels in general begin at 12 cents for a little plastic one that is even a bit small for filling jam jars. 'Funny thing is, I hardly ever use funnels myself—which probably explains why I spend half my day wiping up.'"

If you would like to know where to find these items please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Government Insincere Says Indian Activist

TORONTO (CP)—Delia Opekokew is a Canadian Indian who believes that her people can lift themselves up by their bootstraps.

She is proud of her people and of their rich heritage. But more than that, she is moved to action—striving to better the lot of the Indian in Canada, not through words alone but through deeds as well.

Twenty-three years old, Delia is an Indian of the Canoe Lake reserve in Saskatchewan, and a former communications worker with the All-Indian Federation of Saskatchewan. Now she is organizing secretary for the Ontario native development fund, a branch of the Indian-Eskimo Association.

"As Indians," says Delia, "we are asking for the right to work with our own people, to have control over some of our own affairs."

"The people working on the Indian situation are not Indians, yet the Indians know the conditions of their people and feel they can improve conditions faster. Governments are so technical they sometimes cannot feel."

Delia took an active part in the May 20 Queen's Park protest against Ontario's social and family services minister, John Yaremko, hoping to make the government begin to "feel."

Like the staff of this department who resigned in protest against government inactivity, Delia says the government appears "insincere" in its efforts to help the Indian.

For Delia, statistics supplied by the National Indian Brotherhood about the plight of the Canadian Indian tell a bitter tale. Nearly half of all Indian families earn a yearly income of $1,000, or one-fifth the national average.

More than 40 per cent of Indian families need relief each year, or 10 times the national average. The preschool mortality rate for Indian children also has been estimated at 10 times the national average.

"The Indian is isolated from the mainstream of social and academic life, and has been forced to live on one area of land like an animal in a cage," says Delia.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Not Hereditary

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My best friend and her husband have two adopted children, a boy and a girl. The little girl is nearly five, and she is a very affectionate child who likes to hug, kiss and climb all over the men who visit in the home.

The mother expressed great concern over this, and confided, "I know what her real mother was like, and that's what worries me." (The implication being that because most adopted children are products of unwed mothers, they will turn out "bad" like their mothers.) I am sure that many people feel that this is true, but I, for one, do not believe it.

I feel so strongly about this, Abby, because I happen to be adopted, although few of my friends are aware of it. I would like to see this letter printed with your comments. Thank you.—Adopted and Hurt.

DEAR ADOPTED: The causes of illegitimacy are not hereditary. Your friend is unbelievably ignorant, and I hope someone educates her before she communicates her foolish fears to her adopted children.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl. I am pretty and smart, have a good figure and a nice complexion, and people tell me I have a good personality.

My friend is fat, has a pimply complexion and a terrible personality, but she gets all the boys. Can you help me?—Not Popular.

DEAR NOT: No, but I'll bet your fat friend with the pimply complexion and terrible personality can. Watch her and listen to her and find out why the boys find her so attractive. She may not be so great, but if she makes other people think they're great, she'll win a popularity contest.

DEAR ABBY: This isn't just an ordinary mother-in-law gripe. I really do love my mother-in-law, but she does something that grates me no end.

Whenever I have something new on, she wants to know where I bought it, how much it costs, and would I mind terribly if she got one like it since "we don't go around in the same crowd"? (It's true, we don't go around in the same crowd, but we both go to a lot of the same places, and we know a lot of the same people.)

Abby, she's a darling woman, and we're the same size, and can wear the same styles, but what can I do? Of course I tell her I don't mind, but I don't enjoy going somewhere dressed like one of the Bobsey twins. So what do you suggest?—One of a kind.

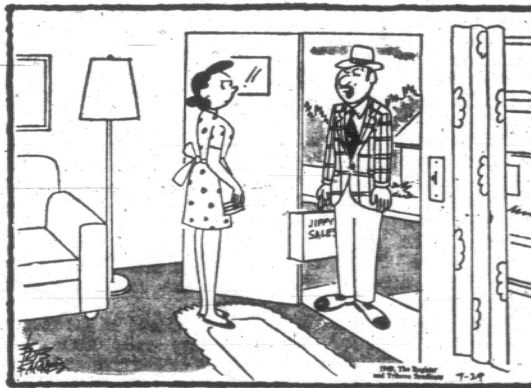

DEAR ONE: I suggest you either level with her—and quit telling her you don't mind when you do mind, or else continue as you are and suffer the consequences.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

Crab Louis Sparkles

Among the dishes for which the West is famous is a crab salad said to have first been served in a San Francisco restaurant around 1911. It is known as Crab Louis.

Crab Louis is distinguished by a delicately flavored dressing. In essence, the dish consists of cooked crab meat mounded on lettuce, garnished with wedges or slices of tomato and hard-cooked egg, and accompanied by the Louis dressing.

Westerners make this salad with the Dungeness crab of the Pacific but it is an ideal salad to point up the distinctive good flavor of any variety of crab. For a new taste experience, try making it with Atlantic queen crab.

The home economists of the federal department of fisheries and forestry offer two kitchen-tested recipes. The first makes the standard version and the second a delicious new variation in which the crab instead of being served with the dressing is molded in it. An excellent make-ahead dish for party luncheon or buffet supper, the latter has all the good flavor of the original. Guests will enjoy its velvety texture and rich, cool smoothness.

CRAB LOUIS

One pound queen crab meat or other crab meat, fresh or frozen; 2 heads iceberg lettuce; 4 tomatoes; 4 hard-cooked eggs.

Louis Dressing: 1 cup mayonnaise; ¼ cup chili sauce; ¼ cup finely chopped green onions; ¼ cup finely chopped green pepper; ½ cup heavy cream, whipped.

Thaw frozen crab meat. Drain. Examine carefully and remove any remaining shell or cartilage. Cut crab meat into bite-size chunks.

Cover four individual salad plates with the outer lettuce leaves. Shred the hearts and place a bed of shredded lettuce in the centre of each plate. Top with chunks of crabmeat. Cut tomatoes into wedges and eggs lengthwise into quarters. Circle crab mounds with tomato and egg wedges.

To make dressing, combine mayonnaise, chili sauce, green

cup mold or individual molds. Chill for about three hours, or until set. Unmold on serving platter. Garnish with lettuce and tomato wedges. Makes six servings.

MOLDED CRAB LOUIS

One pound queen crab meat or other crab meat, fresh or frozen; 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin; 1 cup water; 1 cup mayonnaise; 2 tbsps. lemon juice; ¼ cup chili sauce; ½ tsp. salt; ¼ cup finely chopped green onions, including the tops; ¼ cup finely chopped green pepper; 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped; ½ cup heavy cream, whipped; lettuce; tomato wedges.

Thaw frozen crab meat; drain. Remove any remaining shell or cartilage. Cut meat into bite-size chunks. Soften gelatin in water. Set over simmering water or low direct heat to dissolve. Blend in mayonnaise, lemon juice, chili sauce and salt.

Refrigerate until thickened to the consistency of unbeaten egg white, stirring occasionally. Combine green onion, green pepper, eggs and crab. When gelatin mixture is slightly thickened, add crab mixture and gently fold in the whipped cream.

Turn into a greased, five-

IMPROVES TASTE

Place a wide strip of bacon rind, the fat side down, over a venison roast during the last hours of cooking. This makes the venison much tastier.

Older Women Forgotten

OTTAWA (CP) — Older women have a real problem buying clothes, Senator Muriel Fergusson (L—New Brunswick) complained recently at a meeting of the Senate's special committee on poverty.

She said dresses were too short and wrongly designed for older people, creating special problems for women with little money to spend.

The 70-year-old senator isn't the only person concerned about the problem.

An article in Canadian Consumer says that if you are a woman past age 45, you may have money to buy a dress but you will probably have trouble finding one that fits and suits you.

If you are 55, you will have to look much harder, the article says.

"If you are 65, just forget it."

Although more than one woman in 10 in Ontario is more than 65 years of age, a survey by the Ontario Red Cross and the Ontario Consumers' Association found that older women are virtually forgotten by the garment industry.

There was reasonable evidence that the same situation existed everywhere in Canada.

Garments for older women are designed with a dismal lack of imagination, the publication suggests.

"Lack of imagination shows in a dress made in a style no young person would wear and closed with a long back zipper few older persons could reach," the article says.

Even if the style were neither too youthful nor mid-Victorian, the color was sure to be wrong.

"It is hard to understand why manufacturers persist in using unadorned black, dull wines and greens and bright, hard blues and reds when soft shades of almost any color are flattering to skins no longer blooming with youth."

"Not only are attractive clothes practically non-existent for seniors, they certainly don't get much help finding what there is available."

Few advertisements were aimed at the older woman.

Grandmothers appeared in large numbers at fashion shows—but out in the audience, not modelling clothes suitable for their age group.

However, help may be at hand, the article says.

The federal government specifications board's committee on standardization of garment sizes recently decided to study women's garment sizing with a view to developing some system of uniformity.

"Should there emerge from this a new size category to fit the older figure and the garment industry is persuaded to devote a fraction of the time now spent catering to teen-agers in designing for it, hundreds of thousands of Canadian women would be given a new lease on life."

Stresses Luxury Look

ROME (UPI) — Velvets and satins, two things traditionally associated with princesses, are sprinkled generously through the fall and winter fashion collection of Princess Irene Galitzine.

The princess stressed a luxury look for evening in the first show given in her new, mirror-walled studio with its russet-brown, suede-textured carpet.

The see-through look she loved in January was almost gone, although there was an occasional eye-opener like the black-and-white pantsuit through which the model's white panties plainly showed.

From shoulder to hip there was a scant inch of flesh to be seen in a regal emerald velvet gown composed of two slim panels clipped together at the side by linked gold circlets.

Ring Found In Potato

ALVARADO, Mich. (AP) — Mrs. Neil Coulter of Alvarado lost her wedding ring last spring as she worked in her garden. She searched and searched but couldn't find the ring.

It showed up recently while Mrs. Coulter and her family were eating dinner. A baked potato that came from the Coulter garden contained the ring.

Farms Reflect Social Change

By JEAN SHARP

AURORA, Ont. (CP) — It hasn't been so long, but it sounds like a different world.

In the first years Mrs. Elton Armstrong was married, from 1931 on, she whiled away her time getting three meals a day for nine people, helping raise a garden, putting down 200 two-quart sealers of strawberries, filling crocks and sealers with meat for the winter, attending Women's Institute meetings and church.

Perhaps nowhere do the changes in Canadian life in recent decades show so clearly as in the way a farm woman spends her day.

Mrs. Armstrong lives in a 160-year-old house on a 175-acre farm now owned by her son. About 25 miles north of Toronto, on a main highway, the community is on its way to becoming a suburb. A couple of subdivision houses have been built across the road.

Mrs. Armstrong's father-in-law bought the farm in 1919 for $8,500. Her son took it over at her husband's death in 1965. Mrs. Armstrong says if and when he sells it to be subdivided, he may well be able to retire on the proceeds. In the meantime, she says, it is almost prohibitively expensive to keep it running.

Use of Money

Asked what she thinks of as the biggest change in the life on a farm in the last 35 years, she did not name machinery, the encroachment of the city, freezers or the amount of work. She said it is the part money plays.

"It used to be that everything was done at home, and nothing was bought outside."

"Now there is no farm labor. In those days we had three men plus my husband living here. My mother lived with us for 15 years and eventually we had four children. There were nine or 10 of us to sit down to every meal."

"The men had three meals a day and their laundry done. They got $15 a month and their board. One chap was here six months and at the end he had the $90. We always kept unmarried men."

"Sometimes there were threshing crews, 15 men to feed, or 20 men for two or three days putting corn in the silo."

"We grew all our own food. I put away 200 two-quart sealers of strawberries for the winter. You had to; you couldn't go to the store and buy the things you can now."

"There weren't the consumer goods there are now. If you went to the store with a $5 bill, you would come back with half change because all you would buy was tea and coffee, perhaps a bit of rice or prunes."

Supplied Own Food

"We kept an orchard, everything did, but not on a commercial scale. We had cherry, pear and apple trees. We had fall and winter pears that would keep until Christmas. And of course, they all had to be looked after."

Mrs. Armstrong kept beef and hogs, mostly fed on food he grew himself. The family killed and preserved their own meat.

"You would cut the meat in small pieces and put it in sealers, boil it in the jars. We rendered bacon and stored it in its own fat in crocks."

"And mind you, I cooked on a wood stove. I had an electric plug-in stove, but it wasn't heavy duty."

She also cooked in the summer kitchen that is still attached to the house.

Mrs. Armstrong now uses a freezer and cake mixes sometimes, and is glad to have them, but she says many of the kitchen skills are dying along with such skills as quilting.

"I made my own butter, though I didn't make bread. I do it now for curiosity, but I didn't have the time then."

"The younger girls now don't know the first thing about things like preserving. They don't have to do it. They can go to the store and buy food that may come from Australia or from Africa. It's one of the things the matter with the Canadian economy."

Mrs. Armstrong did not spend all her time in the kitchen. She and other farm women made most of their own and their children's clothes.

In her case, both town and school were close enough that getting there and back was not the problem it was for many farm families.

Community life centered on a community club and on a union church. People of all denominations met for worship in a Quaker church, at services held by clergy who came from nearby Newmarket.

"It helped keep people together. Now there is no community life. The new houses are just bedrooms for people who work in Toronto, and there are only three 'old' families left in the area."

WHAT DO I DO NEXT?

Jenny Thomassen tries her hand at weaving under the watchful eye of Brenda Richardson, a member of the Victoria Hand Weavers' Guild. The guild is holding a special six-week exhibit at the Provincial Museum. There will be demonstrations from 10 to 12 a.m. and 2 to 4 p.m. of weaving and spinning. Among the spinners will be Marjorie Hill, one of the few flax spinners in this area. She will be working with native flax. Other spinners will use local wool. There will also be a display of articles made by guild members, ranging from woven lampshades to ecclesiastical garments.

Flexible Mother Models, Admiring Daughter Follows

TORONTO (CP) — Keeping abreast of the times is the key to success in modelling, says a 38-year-old Toronto model who shares her profession with her 19-year-old daughter.

"Don't stand still and say 'I like it the old way,'" advises Jean Williams, in private life a housewife and mother of two. "You've got to keep trying new styles and hairdos. Be flexible. Change with the times."

She says that when she "first saw the ugly chunky shoes, I thought I would never wear them. They looked so cumbersome. I changed my mind about them, though, and was one of the first to wear them."

Mrs. Williams and her daughter Wendy will model fashions at this year's Canadian National Exhibition opening in mid-August.

"We've modelled together in fashion shows before," says Mrs. Williams. "The difference is that I've been modelling for 23 years and Wendy started a year ago."

THINK YOUNG

"I started modelling when I was 15, married at 17 and had my first child at 19. I don't feel hesitant about mentioning the fact that I'll be 39 in January."

"The way I feel is that if you think young, you feel young. A healthy body and attitude of mind reflect in your face."

Wendy says growing up and seeing her mother modelling on stage made her decide to be a model. "It was always so exciting seeing my mother up there and I grew up wanting to be a model."

"I love having a fresh hairdo, getting made up and then wearing all those lovely clothes in front of an audience," says Wendy.

How does her mother feel about Wendy entering the same profession?

Valley Centres Study Possibility of Merger

DUNCAN — An inter-council committee has been set up to study amalgamation of services from each council, the committee will consider alteration of boundaries, water and sewage systems, and the possibility of full amalgamation.

The unanimous decision to choose the committee and set it to work "without delay" was reached at a joint meeting Monday night. The councils will choose their members at their next meetings, and a progress report is expected 90 days later.

A GREAT STEP — The study, originally suggested by Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce, was described by North Cowichan Ald. Tom Burge as "a great step forward."

Fellow Alderman Dennis Hogan said the decision would end a "sterile, static and no-co-operative co-existence of the two councils. I've been attending meetings like this for four years, it's time something went ahead."

A suggestion by Ald. John Cannon of North Cowichan that survey of the Chemainus River as a water source also be undertaken was rejected by Mayor Jim Quailie of Duncan who suggested it would appear to be a regional matter.

The regional board of the Cowichan Valley has already gone on record as wishing to initiate a study of the Chemainus River as a valley water source.

The joint services study will include only those areas within the present Duncan-North Cowichan jurisdiction.

Woman, Boys Drown; Man Still Missing

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — The bodies of a Campbell River mother, her son and the son of a neighbor were recovered Monday by RCMP after a boating accident off this Vancouver Island fishing resort.

The search continued for the woman's husband, who was presumed drowned.

Dead are Doreen Jensen, her 10-year-old son Randy and Ronald Brownson, 9. Still missing was F. P. Jensen, 34.

Police said the four left Squirrel Cove, 20 miles east of here, Sunday night for Campbell River and, when they failed to arrive, a search was started Monday morning.

WATER USE MAY BE LIMITED

DUNCAN — The city will likely impose water restrictions unless there is either a heavy rainfall or severe cut-backs in the use of water, Mayor Jim Quailie said today. Quailie said the city wells were pumping about 3,000,000 gallons of water a day, "about three times the normal amount for this time of year."

All garden sprinkling is to stop when the fire siren in the city firehall sounds, he said. "We are asking the co-operation of everyone new so that we don't have to impose restrictions later on."

WOMAN'S SALMON Still Biggest During Derby

COWICHAN BAY — Mrs. Edith Williams of Cowichan Station continued to hold top place as the Cowichan Bay Salmon Club ladder derby entered its third week Monday.

Mrs. Williams caught a 32-pound, five-ounce salmon the first week of the derby which began July 13.

Duncan Atwell of Duncan is next rung down with a spring salmon weighing 28 pounds, 13 ounces. Hugh Reid of Cowichan Bay was third with a 28-ounce, seven-ounce salmon.

Victoria residents Harry Horton and William Hollick are sixth and eighth.

The derby continues until Aug. 16. The top 50 fishermen holding runs on the ladder at that time will compete Aug. 24 for the honor of Ladder Man 1969.

Atwell's spring salmon was heaviest caught last week. Alan Laigaard of Duncan caught the second heaviest, 24 pounds, 14 ounces.

University Student Living Costs Rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Tuition fees at Canadian universities and degree-granting colleges are remaining relatively stable this fall, but living costs for students will rise sharply, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The bureau surveyed 48 universities and colleges and found that although about one-third of them are increasing their tuition fees, the amount of the increases is small.

Accommodation fees, however, will be higher in about half the institutions, the increases ranging from $25 to $250 with an average of about $50. The accommodation fees apply only to university-operated residences and not off-campus private quarters.

The DBS survey did not cover student transportation costs, or personal expenditures for books, clothing, entertainment and the like. These would add several hundred dollars to the typical student's costs.

Tuition fees in arts and science faculties range from $400 for the academic year at the University of Alberta campuses at Calgary and Lethbridge to highs of $635 at Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B., and $610 at Dalhousie University, Halifax.

In medicine, the highest fees are at Dalhousie, $710 and at McGill University, Montreal, ranging from $703 to $719. Lowest are at the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, and $450 at Memorial University, St. John's, Nfld., where the provincial government pays tuition for full-time Newfoundland students, and at Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown, which offers only a pre-med course.

Engineering tuition fees range from $410 to $505 at the University of Saskatchewan, Saskatoon, and $450 at Memorial University, St. John's, Nfld., where the provincial government pays tuition for full-time Newfoundland students, and at Prince of Wales College, Charlottetown, which offers only a pre-med course.

Lowest university-run student accommodation fees are quoted for University of Saskatchewan $610 to $763, and the University of Winnipeg, $611, for room and board for the eight or nine-month school year. Fees range as high as $1,149 at Queen's University, Kingston.

The bureau said its figures are intended only to give a general picture of university and college tuition and accommodation costs, and may not be applicable to individual cases.

Indian Office Won't Close

DUNCAN — Unconfirmed reports that the Indian Affairs office here will be closed and residents serviced through the Nanaimo office are not based on fact, Mayor Jim Quailie told city council Monday night.

Quailie said he had received assurance in a letter from Tommy Douglas, member of Parliament for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, that the office here will remain open.

Douglas said Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien had told him "the Duncan office is required to provide day-to-day service to Indian people of the area."

Fair Entries Close Aug. 30

DUNCAN — Entries for the 102nd annual Cowichan Exhibition Sept. 5 and 6 will close Aug. 30.

Exhibitors can enter a wide variety of items and events including horses and cattle, garden and field produce, fruit, honey, flowers, needlework, photography, fine arts and Indian crafts.

Also provided will be a pet show, dog races, Highland dancing, a variety show, a square dancing contest, steering, horseshoe pitching, sheep dog trials and 4-H demonstrations.

Other events will be a battle of the bands, a horse show, a judo demonstration, a puppet show, loggers' sports, a western variety show, a tug o' war, and a women's nail-driving contest.

President Installed

DUNCAN — Harry Gargulis Monday was installed as president of the Duncan Junior Chamber of Commerce by District President George Robins.

About 200 members and their wives attended the meeting, which had Minister Without Portfolio Phil Gaglardi as guest speaker.

Palestinians' Trial Date Set

ZURICH, Switzerland (Reuters) — Justice authorities said Monday the trial of three Palestinians accused of machine-gunning an El Al Israeli jetliner at Zurich airport February probably will be held this fall.

They said an Israeli security agent said to have killed a fourth attacker would also be tried in the fall. Agent More-dehai Rachamin, 22, was freed on bail a month after the shooting and was said to have joined the bodyguard unit of Israeli Premier Golda Meir.

Prep Schoolers Win Medals

A student at Brentwood College in Mill Bay has won top honors with a Trail student as the top-ranking B.C. scholarship student to graduate from Grade 12 on the academic-technical program.

Both William Holmes of Vancouver and Trail student Per Ake Suneby obtained an average 99 per cent and shared the Governor-General's Silver Medal as the top student.

The announcement was made by Education Minister Donald Brown as he released exam results of all Grade 12 and 13 students who have applied for provincial government scholarships.

Scholarship applicants qualifying with first-class standing of 80 per cent or higher receive three-quarters of their tuition fees for the next academic year or semester at the designated post-secondary educational institution which they attend.

The top group of students earning second-class standing of 70 to 79 per cent receive one-half of their tuition fees while the remainder of this second-class group are granted one-third of their tuition fees.

This year, 3,746 Grade 12 and 13 students wrote for scholarships, of whom 1,199 received first-class and 970 received second-class awards.

Vancouver Island students scoring 95 per cent or better were:

• Steven Gergel of Duncan, Cowichan Senior Secondary, 98 per cent.

• Terrance Gunderson of Campbell River, Georges Vanier Senior Secondary, 97 per cent.

• Melvin Klassen of 1464

Stroud, Victoria, Victoria Senior Secondary, 95.5 per cent.

• John Sobkowicz of 1420 Simon, Mount Douglas Senior Secondary, 95.5 per cent.

• Heather Brook of 3360 Woodburn, Norfolk House, 95 per cent.

Hockey Bid Gets Nod At Claremont

Non-resident students who wish to attend Saanich schools may have to get the school board's approval and pay fees set at the trustees' discretion.

A motion to that effect was tabled by the board at its meeting Monday, and will come up for discussion in August.

Trustees expressed concern that large numbers of students, unhappy with the schools they attend in Greater Victoria, might attempt to enroll in already overcrowded Saanich schools.

Trustees approved an application by the Victoria Cougars to send four young hockey players to Claremont Senior Secondary on the understanding that the parents pay a $250 fee.

Dino Discoverer Dies

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Sammy Watkins, 65, who was active as an orchestra leader, song writer and show business personality for 43 years, died Saturday. Watkins discovered singer Dino Crocetti, eventually changing his name to Dean Martin.

"Scalp tension, a sign of the times, is one cause of your hair loss," says trichologist M. D. Harrison: to balding man. Harrison directs the famous Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists, whose main office is in Vancouver. They are sending a specialist here to advise men and women how to correct hair troubles by home treatment.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Wednesday & Thursday

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness — and growing thicker hair — will be demonstrated in Victoria this Wednesday and Thursday, July 30 and 31. This news was released here today by A. B. Harrison, internationally famous director of Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In the announcement, Harrison named staff trichologist J. Remy to conduct the Victoria clinic. Remy will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday at the Hotel Century Inn.

Examine You Free

"I want to make it clear that you incur no obligation by seeing Mr. Remy," director Harrison said. "Your only obligation is to yourself — to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison Home Treatment, we will frankly tell you so."

"We always make a personal examination before suggesting any treatment," he pointed out. "There is no one cure-all that will correct every one of the 18 scalp disorders that cause baldness."

Who Can Be Helped?

Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No," said Harrison sincerely. "We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. Usually, we can grow more hair even where you have only 'fuzz' now."

The important thing is: Don't wait until it's too late!

Best evidence of the success of Harrison treatment is the phenomenal growth behind it. Harrison trichologists hold clinics in all major cities across Canada.

"Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do," declared Harrison. But to overcome the average man's initial

Free Scalp Examination

See Mr. Remy in person. Learn how baldness can be corrected, and new hair grown. The new Harrison method permits you to actually correct your baldness and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk at the Hotel Century Inn, Wednesday or Thursday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Remy's suite number.

You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

OAK BAY PROBE STALLS BYLAW

A zoning bylaw on garbage burning was stalled Monday when Oak Bay council decided to investigate disposal methods used by apartment houses in Oak Bay.

Ald. Douglas Watts warned stringent banning of garbage burning "could result in a worse evil of fly concentrations."

Council decided to join Victoria and Saanich in putting the question of Sunday sports to the residents at the December election.

It also voted to hold a public hearing Sept. 2 at 7:30 p.m. on a zoning bylaw to permit construction of apartments by Tudor Estates Ltd. over four lots in the 2000 block Granite Street.

A bylaw rezoning 2113 Foul Bay for an extension of Hitchman and Saunders' service station was approved, although several residents protested before council.

Five identical bids for 20 street light fixtures roused the suspicions of council.

After accepting the bid of Canadian General Electric, council decided to refer the matter to the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission in Ottawa for investigation.

Watts noted that identical bids were continually being received by council.

Ald. G. Scott Wallace also queried bids for gravel, now being tendered in tonnage rather than cubic yardage.

"We should check and see we're getting our money's worth. Let's make sure this is dry weight, and not with water added."

Baby-Food Makers Deny Health Risk

By SPENCER RICH

WASHINGTON (WP)—The H. J. Heinz and Gerber Products companies denied flatly to a Senate committee Monday that there is any evidence of health danger from adding salt to monosodium glutamate (MSG) to processed baby foods.

But under questioning, Heinz officials conceded that the chief of the Heinz nutritional research laboratory, Thomas A. Anderson, had recommended that the firm stop adding MSG to its baby foods for enhancement of taste.

"We don't have any yes-men on our staff," said Dr. I. J. Hutchings, Heinz general manager of research and development. "He made a recommendation to his superior and it hasn't been decided" to accept it.

Sen. George S. McGovern, chairman of the Senate select committee on nutrition and human needs, made Anderson's recommendations public by placing in the hearing record a June 27, 1969, letter from Anderson to Dr. John W. Olney of Washington University, St. Louis.

At an earlier Senate hearing, Olney described research work showing that mice injected with MSG developed eye lesions and baby mice who received injections suffered brain damage. On this basis, he recommended that food companies stop adding it to baby food products.

Anderson's letter to Olney stated: "Even prior to reading your (research) paper in Science (magazine), I recommended that Heinz remove MSG from baby food simply from the philosophical viewpoint that there has been no demonstrated nutritional need for this ingredient. Its presence is solely as a flavor-enhancer for the mother who might taste the food. I would say that there is now a pretty good chance that we will remove MSG from our baby foods... I wasn't doing too well selling the idea before your article appeared in Science."

Anderson's optimism about the company receiving the substance appeared ill-founded Monday, as Hutchings and Heinz president R. Burt Gookin said they know of no evidence that MSG or salt—which an earlier witness said caused hypertension in laboratory animals—is harmful to children as used in baby foods.

Gookin said the company would not remove either substance unless some major reputable body concluded that it was harmful. He called for a study of the matter by a panel of experts to be appointed by the National Research Council. The findings of such a panel, he indicated, would be accepted by the whole industry and would avoid the possibility of loss of competitive position by one company if it took out the taste-enhancers while other companies did not.

Pictures of Mars Televised Tonight

By BRUCE RUSSELL

PASADENA, Calif. (Reuters)—World television viewers, still riding high from watching man's first walk on the moon, will get another space-age bonus tonight when they see the first TV pictures of the red planet Mars.

Television cameras being carried toward earth's nearest neighbor planet by the Mariner VI and VII spacecraft will not get close enough to show if life exists.

But they are expected to pick up enough information about water, ice and soil on Mars and the makeup and intensity of its atmosphere to reveal whether life is possible.

The two windmill-shaped spacecraft, which set off from Cape Kennedy nearly five months ago, will swoop down to within 2,000 miles of the Martian surface.

The cameras of Mariner VI were switched on Monday night but the pictures stored inside the craft will not be transmitted back to earth until tonight 9:35 p.m. EDT.

CAMERA WORKING WELL

Mariner VI took its first photograph at 10:26 p.m. PDT Monday night (1:25 a.m. EDT today). Scientists said the camera was working well.

Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, who as head of the president's space advisory council advocates manned exploration of Mars, arranged to be at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory to watch the photographs come in.

Television watchers across the globe should be able to see a two-hour, 52-minute transmission of a series of 33 still photographs through a satellite relay. But the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, where the Mariner's pictures are being received, does not know yet how many countries will be hooked up to the transmission.

In the United States, a number of education stations are expected to broadcast all 12 hours of transmission from the two Mariners while commercial stations will interrupt regular programs to show key pictures.

Mariner VI will reach its closest point to Mars Wednesday and Mariner VII Monday. The first will concentrate on filming the equator region of Mars and the second will focus on the equator, southern hemisphere and South Pole areas.

WILL DIRECT CAMERAS

The brightness of the planet itself will be used to keep the television cameras properly directed and focused.

The films are expected to clear up theories that Mars has polar ice caps like earth and that the rest of the planet is covered with moss.

Methadone Addiction Keeps Junkies Close to Experts

By STEVE HOME

Times Reporter

Wednesday morning.

Addicts filter into the waiting room of the Narcotic Addiction Foundation as unobtrusively as the wan light seeping under doors from other rooms.

The junkies sit quietly, engrossed in something. Themselves, their shoes, unlovely walls, the white doorway to the dispensary. Almost like bus stop people except for something alien in their gaze. Flat eyes.

A visitor to the foundation on Vancouver's West Broadway senses an atmosphere of total need.

Green Fluid

In the cramped dispensary, pharmacists open cupboards jammed with bottles. The bottles are filled with green fluid which is a lime base containing methadone.

Methadone is a synthetic narcotic derived from morphine. It is highly addictive. It is legally prescribed by a physician.

Wednesday is fix day at the foundation.

The addicts moulded to the worn chairs in the dispensary's massive anti-chamber are waiting their turn.

The use of methadone as a means of breaking dependency on heroin is an experiment, explains the clinic's director, Dr. Hugh Williams.

Methadone has been used before, since about 1960, in what Dr. Williams calls the Low Methadone Maintenance Program, shortened to LMMP in technical jargon, and called "Lump" by foundation staff.

Massive Doses

But last year, in response to an increasing burden of active case loads, the foundation introduced a High Methadone Maintenance Program involving massive doses of the drug. It's called "Hump."

Dr. Williams says the program has been a smash success in dealing with heroin addicts.

"At present the two methadone programs account for 70 per cent of our active case load."

"Last month we were dealing with 250 addicts, and the number increases every month."

The value of methadone as a treatment for junkies extends through several spheres, the doctor explains. It has a chemical value, a legal value and a social value.

"One of the principles behind giving massive doses of methadone lies in its chemical therapeutic value. If the drug is given in a big enough dosage it will effectively block the euphoric effect of the heroin."

"Addicts on our HMMP program inevitably try heroin while they are patients, but they find they are wasting their money at $15 a cap because of the blocking effect."

"At the same time, they find themselves addicted to methadone, but with a constant and inexpensive source."

It also means that when the addict comes in to pick up his free supply of methadone, he is exposed, of necessity, to professionals dedicated to working at eliminating his habit.

"When the addict comes in for the first time all he's interested in is getting drugs

Evaluation of the year-old program, originally tried in New York, is done along what Dr. Williams calls "realistic terms of reference."

"Three areas, the extent of drug abuse and its increase or decrease, employment of addicts and increase or decrease in criminal activity appear to be the most accurate way of evaluating the success of treatment."

For Older Addicts

"If we can improve patients in all three of these areas then we have what society can call a cure."

On the LMMP program, designed for the older addicts needing prolonged but less massive doses, 36 per cent now are employed full time and 24 per cent are employed part time.

The HMMP program results are more dramatic.

Dr. Williams said 54 per cent show no evidence of drug abuse, 22 per cent show minimal abuse, while 33 per cent of the patients are now employed full time and 20 per cent are part-time workers.

Of the active case load on HMMP 70 per cent are either decreasing in criminal activity or are not involved.

"Both programs are extremely encouraging," he said, "but doesn't in any way cure drug dependency. Addiction is a medical illness and it deserves rational medical treatment."

Less Successful

He said the three non-drug programs—inpatient withdrawal, out-patient withdrawal, and the drug-free house environment have been less successful.

A third experimental drug program using the drug cyclazocine looks promising, the doctor said.

"Cyclazocine is a narcotic antagonist," he said. "It actively counteracts use of a narcotic. Its only drawback at present is that if the user stops his dosage he can get a narcotic high within 24 hours."

"Hopefully we'll develop a long-acting drug like cyclazocine, that would be a major breakthrough in narcotic addiction treatment, with far-reaching implications for the future."

He emphasized that medical treatment of the addict is only a minor part of any socially-acceptable cure.

"We are dealing here with equally difficult social problems," he said.

"We have to fracture the tight-knit world of the addict and rehabilitate the drug abuser to a productive role in society."

Second In a Series

—but once he's in here we can go to work on him."

Addicts picking up their methadone must submit a urine sample for analysis. It allows the foundation physicians to keep track of the drugs he may be using along with methadone.

That permits the foundation to accurately follow his drug-taking activities each day.

There is another chemical value to methadone," says Dr. Williams, in that its euphoric effect, unlike heroin, is not incapacitating.

"The high attained from heroin is quite characteristic," he said, "the addicts coast, they're on the mental slide, on the nod, and they can't perform any work."

"With methadone it's not so, and the effects last up to 24 hours, 18 hours longer than heroin."

Community

Methadone also helps disrupt the sense of community many addicts feel when taking a fix.

"Heroin is always injected, but methadone is dispersed orally in a lime or orange base."

"By forcing them to take the drug orally we break the ritual of the needle—that strictly psychological thrill that attends preparation of the outfit and the actual injection," Dr. Williams said.

DIVORCE EASING SET

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)

—A bill making it quicker and easier to get a divorce in California has been passed by the state legislature over protests that it will turn the country's most populous state into a divorce mill.

Laboratory officials here said they realize the Apollo 11 flight has overshadowed the Mariner mission. But they believe that the Mariner's passes near the Martian surface may prove as important in space exploration as the moon feat.

Sponsors said Gov. Ronald Reagan had told them he would sign the measure, so it appeared that the first basic change in the state's divorce law since its enactment in 1872 would become law on Jan. 1, 1970.

The main effect is to abolish the seven current grounds for divorce, such as adultery or cruelty, all of which require the court to rule on spouse to blame for a marital breakup. In their place, only two grounds would remain:

The incurable insanity of one spouse or a showing that there are "irreconcilable differences, which have caused the irremediable breakdown of the marriage." The term "divorce" would be replaced—legally—with "dissolution of marriage."

The measure also cuts to six months the current one-year residency requirement and the time between filing for a divorce and getting it.

UN 'Sitting Ducks' Patrol Suez Line

By JESSE W. LEWIS

CAIRO (WP) — "You are sitting there like a duck in a shooting gallery."

This is how, an experienced member of the United Nations truce supervisory organization described his job as a military observer along the Suez Canal cease-fire line.

A military observer's job is to keep track of and make detailed reports on the daily fighting across the canal between Egypt and Israel.

The truce organization also attempts to bring a halt to the daily exchanges of gunfire.

"The shelters are our only help but you are always outside when the shooting begins," one observer said.

The members of the United Nations truce supervisory organization are unarmed.

One observer, Major Bo Roland Plane, a 37-year-old Swedish officer, was killed Sunday on the Egyptian side of the canal when he was caught in the middle of one of these exchanges. He was inside a UN post when an Israeli shell exploded.

FIRST VICTIM

He was the first UN observer to be killed along the canal cease-fire line.

This reporter talked with four observers at different times last week in Cairo — before the death of the Swedish officer. The four observers agreed that their comments could be reported only on the condition that their names, ranks and nationalities not be used.

"You are in the middle of a war," one observer said. "There's firing from both sides — from behind you, from in front of you, sometime you have it almost in your house."

"The UN observation posts are supposed to be safe areas but neither side did stick to that so instead they utilized the OP (or observation posts) as grounds for their own installations... that's a shame and it is an impossible situation," he said.

"If there are troops or guns in your yard it is natural that you are going to get some of the fire."

Although the interviews took place before the Swedish officer was killed, all four of the observers talked of the increasing danger to them and all expressed the fear that it was only a matter of time before one of them would be seriously injured or killed.

"There is so much iron flying around in the air it is a miracle that no one's been killed," another observer said.

The countries that make up the United Nations Truce Supervisory Organization (UNTSO) force on the canal are Sweden, France, Ireland, Austria, Finland, Argentina and Chile. Burmese officers have also been members of the force.

Recently UN Secretary General U Thant and head of UNTSO Lt. Gen. Odd Bull complained of the deterioration of the truce along the canal and of the increasing dangers to the cease-fire observers there.

Bull was in Cairo last week to discuss these matters with Egyptian officials.

Only four of the observers contacted would talk. All said they were under strict orders not to talk. The four observers did so only because they were concerned about the worsening conditions along the canal.

Only one was critical of the United Nations. He complained bitterly of the poor equipment observers had to work with.

All of the men were dismayed by what they felt was lack of respect for the United Nations presence along the canal.

"We are supposed to be observers of an armistice but the situation along the canal is very different from an armistice," one of the observers said.

Before the Magistrate

Robert P. Coffman, 22, of San Francisco, was sentenced to three months in prison Monday for possession of a narcotic.

Central court was told Coffman had been a user of marijuana for the last five years, and had moved from place to place continually.

He was arrested July 19 with a glass jar containing about 1,000 seeds of the illegal plant. He told police a friend had given him the seeds and he had put them in his knapsack and forgotten about them. He said he was on his way to Alaska.

Coffman told Magistrate William Ostler that he did not agree with the facts stated on his pre-sentence report.

"I don't believe I am entirely without ambition, as the report says," the soft-spoken bearded youth said.

Another youth appeared Monday to face a charge of possession of a narcotic.

William Michael Blau, 22, who has lived in Victoria for the past month after coming from the United States, was remanded on bail without electing a form of trial.

He will appear again Aug. 5 to say how he wishes to be tried.

Albert Vanalstine, 22, of the Old Mill Motel, was fined a total of $660 for multiple driving offences.

Court was told the car Vanalstine was driving on Goldstream Avenue lost control, hit two telephone poles, and flipped on its roof. He was driving about 75 miles an hour, police said.

Vanalstine suffered a compound fracture of the ankle and a broken leg, and his passenger broke a leg. Three hours after the accident, the driver had a blood alcohol count of .20, court was told.

He was fined $400 for impaired driving, $250 for dangerous driving, and $10 for crossing an unbroken double centre line.

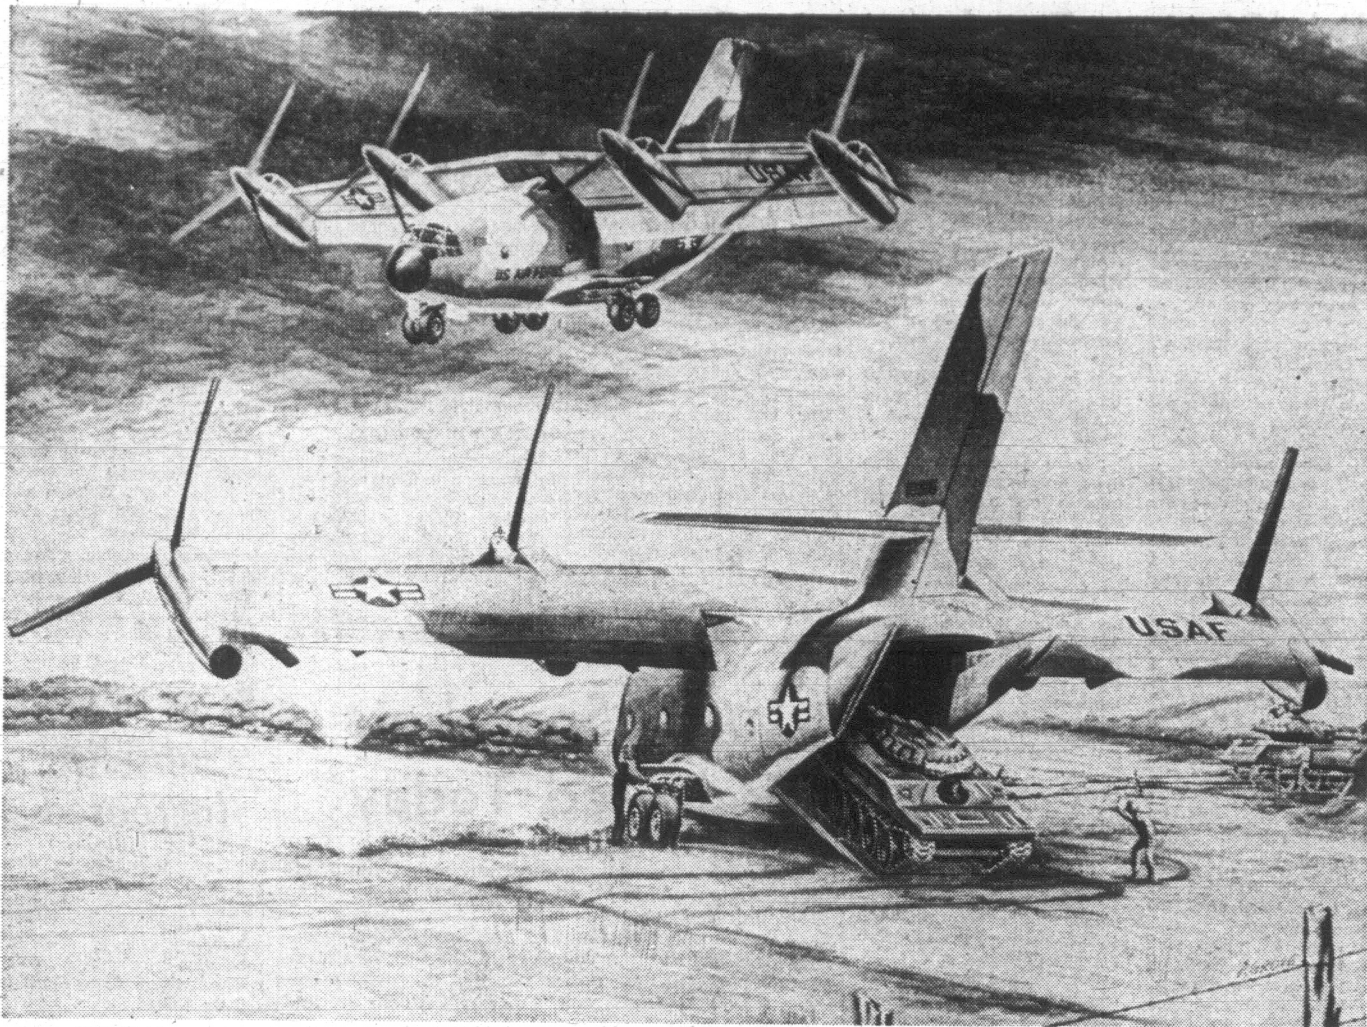

James A. Van Welter, 19, no fixed address, was sentenced to 14 days and fined $150 for three driving offences.

For driving while his licence was under suspension in May he was fined $100, and for a similar offence Sunday he was sentenced to 14 days. For wilful damage—driving into a park and uprooting grass and trees—he was fined $50, and ordered to pay damages of $30.

Failure to pay fines immediately would mean a further term in jail of 19 days in default.

Jonas Daniel Bellore, 20, of 959 Balmoral, was sentenced to one year in prison after he pleaded guilty to theft over $50.

Angry Impasse Faced In U.S.-Japan Talks

TOKYO (WP) — Japan and the United States appeared to be headed for an angry impasse on most major issues in a high-level round of discussions here this week over the return of Okinawa and the pace of Japanese concessions on trade and investment liberalization.

Prompt action by the U.S. in promising to remove lethal chemical warfare agents from Okinawa after an incident of nerve gas leakage last week has undermined Communist and other opposition efforts to give a hot reception to Secretary of State William P. Rogers on his arrival here Monday.

While the opposition has been temporarily disarmed, however, the Japanese government itself has adopted an unusually muscular bargaining stand in the preliminaries to the seventh meeting of the Japan-U.S. joint committee on trade and economic affairs.

Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans, Agriculture Secretary Clifford Hardin and Paul McCracken, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, are among the 35 American delegates attending the annual talks.

On Okinawa, Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's ruling Conservative regime is hardening its stand against U.S. efforts to retain the unrestricted use of U.S. bases on Okinawa following the reversion of the island to Japanese rule.

On disputed trade and investment issues, Japan is seeking to defer significant concessions for two years.

American officials voice hopes that Japan will agree to talks on easing agricultural import restrictions in October.

But concrete liberalization moves are not envisaged in Japanese government circles before 1971.

For the first time, officials are beginning to hint that the only possible way out of the apparent stalemate now developing may lie in a "trade-off" of concessions on security and economic issues.

Both governments have insisted until now that the two areas are completely unrelated and should be considered separately on their merits.

Japanese government sources point to possible increases in Japanese defence and foreign aid spending as ways in which Tokyo might help the U.S. ease its balance of payments deficit.

Officials here also point to plans for agricultural import liberalization and for the selective relaxation of barriers to U.S. industrial investment.

In return for concessions in these areas of great domestic political sensitivity, it is suggested, the U.S. should be prepared to modify its demands for the unrestricted use of the Okinawa bases and to accept a "nuclear-free" status for Okinawa following its reversion to Japan.

U.S. Battlefield Policy Switched To Limited Response to Offensives

SAIGON (CP) — U.S. commanders in Vietnam have modified their battlefield strategy of "maximum pressure" in recent weeks to a strategy of limited response to enemy tactics, U.S. sources said today.

Termed "protective reaction," the new strategy is designed to hold U.S. casualties down and dates from about the time the current battlefield lull began nearly six weeks ago.

The new strategy is being applied primarily in the 3rd Corps tactical zone which includes Saigon and the 11 provinces around it, the area in which most of the fighting has occurred since the lull began June 18.

The sources said that one important aspect of the shift in strategy is that while reconnaissance and ambush patrols and other small units are continuing to circulate freely in the field, large-scale forces now are dispatched only in response to intelligence data that indicates a good chance of meeting the enemy.

Meanwhile, U.S. troops swept a familiar battleground north-west of Saigon today in search of stragglers from the sharpest fighting the Americans have reported in more than a month.

U.S. infantry killed at least 70 Viet Cong in bitter engagements in swamp and wooded areas northwest of Saigon Monday, the U.S. military command announced.

Men from the 25th Infantry Division took on the guerrillas in two battles in the Ho Bo Woods area and the result was a big Viet Cong loss.

Six Americans were killed and 40 wounded in the two encounters.

The main battle took place 27 miles northwest of Saigon.

Viet Adviser Dismissed

SAIGON (Reuters) — President Nguyen Van Thieu dismissed one of his senior advisers, Huynh Van Trong, more than two weeks ago because of reports that the National Liberation Front had been trying to contact him, a government spokesman said today.

"He was fired, relieved of his functions, more than two weeks ago," the spokesman said.

UN Vote Censures Portuguese Bombing

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (WP) — The United Nations Security Council Monday censured Portuguese bombing attacks on the Zambian village of Lote and called on Portugal to desist from further "unprovoked raids against Zambia."

The vote has 11-0, with the United States, Britain, France and Spain abstaining on the resolution introduced by Pakistan. The U.S. and Britain noted that there was insufficient impartial evidence to sustain the censure.

RAISES POINT

One of the affirmative votes was Zambia's, and afterward a Portuguese diplomat privately raised the point that Article 27 of the United Nations Charter prohibits a member from voting in a dispute to which it is a party.

UN secretariat sources said, however, that in the past the council has held that it must determine that a "dispute" rather than a mere "situation" exists in order for this article to apply.

Although Spain did not support the censure, Spanish representative Gabriel Canas strongly implied that Portugal ought to follow the Spanish example in permitting self-determination for its overseas territories.

SPANISH EXAMPLE

Zambia brought the complaint to the Security Council several weeks after the alleged raids, and reportedly after a substantial interval argument on the wisdom of the complaint.

Portugal denied the allegations and contended that its actions had been against terrorists on its side of the border.

Some African states spoke on Zambia's behalf, but there was a notable lack of enthusiasm after Portugal's disclosure in the course of the debate that Portuguese and Zambian representatives had been meeting in London over a period of 18 months to adjust differences.

Many African delegations hold that there should be no contact with Portugal because of its support of Rhodesia and its failure to grant independence to its African territories.

Poll Approves Kennedy Actions

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Globe says that 78 per cent of the 517 Massachusetts voters questioned in a telephone poll favored Senator Edward M.

Kennedy remaining in his Senate seat.

A copyright story on the survey also says 84 per cent of a representative sample of the Massachusetts public approve of the way Kennedy is handling himself in the job as senator. Five per cent disapproved and 11 per cent had no opinion.

Kennedy asked the voters of his state last Friday to help him decide whether he should remain in office after the auto accident that took the life of a young Washington secretary.

The Globe says Kennedy appeared more popular in Boston than in suburbs or other parts of the state. Fully 70 per cent of the Boston sample favored Kennedy for a presidential nomination some time in the future.

In Baltimore, Md., 61 per cent of the persons responding to a television station's telephone poll Monday night said they feel Kennedy should resign from the Senate.

RECEIVED 7,300 CALLS

WMAR-TV said about 7,300 calls were received by the station during the 3½ hours the automatic telephone call counters were operating.

In Logan, W.Va., 1,025 Logan County residents signed a telegram to Kennedy asking him to "continue in the good work that you are in, in the Senate, and for us all."

Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley, leader of the Democratic party in Illinois, said he hopes Kennedy will remain in public life and that he will support him.

KENNEDY'S EXPLANATION LEAVES PAPERS UNHAPPY

NEW YORK (CP) — Following is editorial comment appearing in several United States papers during the weekend on Senator Edward M. Kennedy's televised explanation of the car accident involving him and the death of Mary Jo Kopechne.

Hartford, Conn. Courant — It seems to us the senator failed to level on exactly what happened that night. We cannot see why the girl's body should have been left in the car under the water, especially after he had dived several times to save her, and then brought two friends from the "cookout" to try to get to her. . . . It would seem to us that so long as the senator, a lawyer, has not seen fit to explain this night's events, that further investigation might be necessary.

New York Times — His (Kennedy's) emotion-charged address leaves us less than satisfied with his partial explanation for a gross failure of responsibility, and more than ever convinced that the concerned town, county and state officials of Massachusetts have also failed in their duty thoroughly to investigate this case because of the political personality involved.

New York Post — There were moments when his words seemed wholly convincing and others when they appeared contrived. But what shadowed the recital more than anything he said or failed to say was the sense that such a statement should have been issued many days ago. It may be argued that the impact of the tragedy had rendered him incapable of so extensive and public a declaration until now. Yet the failure of those in charge of the inquiry to ask the most obvious questions and their acceptance of his fragmentary initial account as a satisfying story remains as inexcusable as it is injurious to the senator's position.

Detroit Free Press — We cannot share the glee of the Kennedy-baiters who gloat over this misfortune. . . . but the harsh realities of politics must cause the king-makers of both parties to take a new look at the future. The smart money — if there is such a thing three years in advance — has already gone to Senator Muskie.

Washington Post — Senator Edward Kennedy did not answer all questions that have been asked about the traffic accident. . . . so, inevitably, his performance had some quality of contrivance, some of the marks of a public man manoeuvring to preserve his position in public life.

Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch — Many Americans would view with great fear the prospect of the highest office in the land, with its awesome crises and responsibilities, being held by a man who reacted as Senator Kennedy did to his automobile accident.

Columbus, Ohio, Citizen — Senator Kennedy's explanation has not, in our opinion, rolled away the clouds of doubt as to his qualities in hours of crisis. A man seriously considered for the presidency is supposed to be at least a little bit different, especially considering he would, as president, have his finger on the nuclear trigger.

Some Tips on Fresh Vegetables

By HILDA BEASTALL

The aim of plants is to form seeds for reproduction of their kind. This goal has been reached by the time peas and beans are ready for picking. If the pods are allowed to remain on the plants until the seeds within approach maturity, they need make no further effort to keep alive.

Their mission is fulfilled. The plants wither and die.

A prolonged period of yield can be encouraged by regular picking of pods; or perhaps, more accurately, removal of pods as they reach edible size.

Sometimes when we go over the pea and bean plants carefully we find only a handful of pods to be picked when we need a couple of pounds for a family meal.

Although we like to brag about our garden-fresh vegetables—"only minutes between gathering and eating"—we can quite easily keep the few pods fresh for a day or two by storing them in the refrigerator.

A closed polythene bag will prevent any vegetable moisture from being withdrawn by the dry atmosphere of the refrigerator. Keep the bag in one of the vegetable containers in the lower reaches of the 'fridge.

Some people like to use these small quantities in mixed vegetable casseroles or salads. They are good to eat however prepared. Only long, slow cooking ruins fresh vegetables!

Within a few weeks the life of a pea and bean plants come to its end and for this reason we have already made what we call succession sowings to keep up the supply into September.

It is different with vegetable plants producing a mass of edible flesh surrounding their seeds.

Tomatoes, peppers and all the squash family fall into this group, and they can have fruits left on for longer periods without curtailing the life of the parent plant.

In these instances the pulp, or flesh, which we enjoy eating, are nature's protection for the seed, preventing it from ripening during climatic conditions not suitable for growth of young plants.

Only if the first formed squash and tomatoes are left on the plants until they rot away, would further flowers and fruits be curtailed. By that time, frost in our latitude would have spelled finis.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Railway 'Coolies' Did Excellent Job

By BOB BOWMAN

Two American engineers did outstanding work in building Canada's first transcontinental railway—Andrew Onderdonk and William Cornelius Van Horne.

British Columbia joined Canada in 1871 on the understanding that a railway would be completed within 10 years and nearly succeeded in 1880 when little had been done.

So the government decided to make a gesture, at least, and hired Onderdonk to begin working from west to east.

The 128-mile section from Emory's Bar to Savona was difficult and dangerous, but Onderdonk completed the work on July 29, 1885, by hiring 2,000 workmen from China.

The hiring of the "coolies" was very unpopular in British Columbia because they were willing to work for lower wages.

Yet they did a magnificent job and it was indicative of their character that when they finished at Savona they withdrew to their camp to eat their bowls of rice while many of the white workmen went on a drunken spree.

In the meantime W. C. Van Horne had been building the line from east to west, and when he got to Savona later in the year the residents wanted to change the name of their community to Van Horne.

In those days Savona was only a collection of shacks that had been moved across Lake Kamloops to be on the railway line. Van Horne took one look and suggested that the original name Savona be retained!

Van Horne was a tremendous worker and became president of the CPR in 1888.

He once said: "Why should I go to bed every night? Sleep is only a habit." He liked to play poker and said it was an education as well as a game.

Other events on July 29:

1636 — Island of Montreal was given to M. de Lauzon.

1704 — British force from New England led by Benjamin Church attacked French forts in Acadia.

1848 — Suspension bridge completed over Niagara River.

1876 — Four hundred Icelanders came to Quebec to settle at Gimli, Lake Winnipeg.

1895 — Territorial Exhibition opened at Regina.

He's Hung Up With Phone Problems

LONDON (Reuters) — Auto school owner Keith Marshall has been having a little trouble with his telephone.

First he was given the former number of a soccer fan club—and was inundated with requests for tickets and team pictures.

Next he was given a number which once was the listing of a prostitute—prompting scores of obscene phone calls to his receptionists, he said.

Then he received a number that was just fine—except that it was left out of the telephone directory and no one called him at all.

He finally got back in the directory—but now when he picks up the receiver the phone keeps ringing.

Tired of complaining by telephone, Marshall posted placards outside his school blasting "downright incompetence."

A spokesman for the post office, which runs telephones in Britain, admitted the case was "unfortunate."

'Uncle Les' Offers Special Summer Fun

TORONTO (CP) — Teacher Les Birmingham isn't called Mr. Birmingham by the 195 teenagers who attend a special summer course held at a Toronto high school. Nor is he called Sir.

He's called Uncle Les. But then this is no ordinary school. To the teen-agers who come to classes in bellbottoms and bare feet, and who can smoke if they wish, it's a whole environment of exploration.

That's how the summer program got its name: Summer of Experience. Exploration and Discovery (SEED).

It was started last summer, as "something to do" for bored, restless youth, and was supported by Ying Hope, then chairman of the Toronto board of education.

SEED draws together groups of teen-agers who discuss, with the aid of a teacher, or "catalyst," whatever seems important to them. These discussions are well organized and constructive, but the teacher tries to stay mostly in the background.

So far, groups are studying things as varied as anthropology and Zen philosophy. They are putting on a play, putting out a newspaper, and serving as guinea pigs for a research study on youth.

Mr. Hope is a seminar leader. So are Bill Clemens of the Addiction Research Foundation, writer June Calhoun and TV actor Hamilton Robertson.

SEED has become more than just "something to do" for most of the teen-agers involved. Some say it makes not having a job worth it.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

Throughout the years, Life Master Dave Warner, of Philadelphia, has acquired the reputation of being a practical joker at the bridge table. Here is an example of this proclivity of his.

The opponents had reached a seven-heart contract against Dave. After the adverse trumps had been extracted, the declarer exposed his cards and claimed the contract. Dave told him to play on. The ace of spades was then led. Dave snapped a joker out of his hand, plunked it on the table, and exclaimed: "I'm trumping it! Down one!"

At the table, during the bidding, Dave can also be a "joker," as is evidenced in the deal presented below.

Neither side vulnerable. East deals.

 1 ♠ 1 ♠ (1) Dbl. Pass
 Pass 1 NT (1) Dbl. Pass
 Pass 2 ♦ Pass Pass
 Dbl. Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

The deal arose in the Masters Pairs Championship of 1950. Warner was sitting in the South seat.

His one-spade overall of 8 cents,

East's opening club bid was a "psychic bid," pure and simple. His retreat to one no-trump when West doubled the spade overall was the same type of bid, made in the hope of confusing the opposition.

When the latter bid was doubled by West, Warner bid his real (sic!) suit, diamonds. Imbued with the doubling rhythm established by West, East now got into the act by doubling the two-diamond call. It was a mistake.

The opening spade lead was captured by dummy's ace, after which the ace of trumps was led, felling West's king. Another trump lead then followed, East taking his jack. East returned a spade, South ruffing.

When play had ended, Warner had lost just one heart, two diamonds and two clubs. Thus he fulfilled his doubled two-diamond contract, for a top score on the deal. On this occasion, his shenanigans had paid off. But, as he himself would admit, there have been other days when he indulged in "unorthodox" bidding, with most unhappy results.

Domestic Arms Race Turns Homes to Arsenals

WASHINGTON (CP-AP) — A presidential commission investigating violence in the United States says that a domestic arms race has turned many U.S. homes into arsenals and created a situation so dangerous that its elimination must be national policy.

In a message Monday that reported that 24,000,000 pistols now are in private hands in the U.S., the anti-violence commission called for the near-total removal of the concealable handgun from American life.

The commission said gunfire accounted for 63 per cent of the 12,100 homicides reported in 1968.

President Nixon was urged to ask Congress for laws enabling states to license all owners of pistols, restricting their possession only to those who can prove they need them. Stiff penalties would be provided for illegal possession.

Under the plan, the federal government would move to license handgun owners if a state failed to act within four years after passage of the federal law. Licenses would be limited to police officers, security guards, small businesses in high crime areas and others with a special need for self-protection.

***
The federal government should earmark $500,000,000—about $20 a gun—to pay owners for the pistols turned in under the proposed law, the commission said.

Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, chairman of the national commission on the causes and prevention of violence, urged at a news conference the quick start of a federal program to develop an efficient non-lethal weapon to replace the pistol.

In its statement, the commission supported the essential findings of a staff report which said the quadrupling of handgun sales has moved the U.S. closer to mass violence.

***
"Civil disorders have stimulated gun buying and the growth of black and white extremist groups, leaving this country with a dangerous legacy: the highly explosive combination of fear and firearms," the staff report said.

The study report said most right-wing para-military groups have turned their attention from the fear of external Communist invasion to the fear of internal black mauling. This has led to the proliferation of neighborhood protective associations, it said.

"The urban arms buildup threatens not only to escalate future civil disorders, but also to bring with it greater misuse of firearms in crimes and accidents," the commission said in its separate statement.

MILLIONS HAVE RIFLES

WASHINGTON (AP) — In urging restrictive licensing of pistols in the United States, the national commission on violence issued these statistics Monday:

—In 1968 U.S. civilians owned 90,000,000 guns comprising 35,000,000 rifles, 31,-

—The total number of firearms in private hands increased by 5,300,000 in 1968.

—Gunfire accounted for 63 per cent of the 12,100 homicides reported in 1968.

NEW SERIES ON RUSSIA, CHINA

A series of articles on the Russia-China border dispute begins today.

The articles are by Harrison E. Salisbury, an assistant managing editor of the New York Times, a former Moscow correspondent for that newspaper.

The Russian-speaking journalist won the Pulitzer prize for international correspondence in 1955.

He recently filed a series of reports during a trip to North Vietnam.

Timeless Terror Of War Haunts Asian Interior

By HARRISON E. SALISBURY

In late spring — and spring comes very late in Mongolia — spirals of dust rise high above Kara Korum, darkening the sun at midday and casting over the great steppe of Genghis Khan a sickly, yellow light that seems an ominous portent of disaster.

Watching the scene, I could not escape the premonition that I was witnessing a kind of Wagnerian tragedy, a drama in which the fragile figure of man was being overwhelmed by forces set in motion by the human but mindless notion that he can improve the balance of nature by plowing the ageless grasslands.

This brooding sense of elements uncontrolled and uncontrollable overhangs the Asian heartland today — not only in Mongolia but in Siberia, Central Asia, the Maritime provinces, and, so far as can be judged from a distance, in the remote, forbidden regions of Inner Mongolia, Tibet, Manchuria, North China and along the ancient caravan routes of Sinkiang.

It is not the winds of the Gobi, however, that have touched off the syndrome of apprehension.

True, concern over the winds' rape of the soil was real enough to bring sharp worry lines to the broad brow of Premier Tsesenbal of Mongolia when I talked with him in May in his offices overlooking the great expanse of Sukhe Bator Square in Ulan Bator.

Tsesenbal is a solid, unflappable man who has headed his small country, wedged between Russia and China, for nearly 18 years.

He has confronted a good many crises. But the issue that now concerns him most is not the threat of a new dustbowl.

It is the urgent, overpowering question that dominates the whole Asian heartland today — the simple, ancient, terrible question: Will there be war?

War, that is, between Russia and China; war more savage than any hurricane; war that would set Asia aflame; war whose anuclear winds would poison the Gobi Desert, Manchurian plain and Siberian Taiga alike, turning a supercontinent if not the world into a hostile environment in which even primitive life might no longer be supported.

If the fears of the peoples of inner Asia seem too dramatic, remote or unreal to many in the West, the fault may lie with ourselves — with our distance from the Asian heartland and our deep and almost impermeable sense of unreality when confronted with the evidence of hostility between Russia and China, of massive preparations for war and of actual combat intermittently occurring along China's 4,500-mile frontier with Russia and her 2,500-mile border with Mongolia.

For the plain fact is, as I quickly found out when I managed to penetrate the security belt with which Russia and China now shield their frontiers, that preparations for war are already far advanced.

On the Soviet side, hundreds of thousands of troops have been brought into position or are stationed in holding areas adjacent to the region of probable operations against China.

Massive new air installations have been constructed across Siberia, and existing facilities have been radically expanded.

The build-up of Russian troops is turning Mongolia into an armed camp. The Russians have emplaced the most sophisticated weapons in the armory of contemporary warfare in forward positions both in Mongolia and along the Sino-Soviet frontiers.

It is becoming more and more difficult to

Involvement Urged As Red Deterrent

Times News Services

BANGKOK, Thailand — United States President Richard Nixon came under strong pressure today to maintain U.S. military involvement in the Asian mainland.

Officials of the ailing Southeast Asia Treaty Organization and the Thai government in meetings here pressed for an explanation of the U.S. plan to reduce American military involvement in Asia.

Informed sources reported that Nixon, on the third leg of his five-nation Asian tour, was told the U.S. military presence must be shored up, not cut, to deter the Communists and prevent more Vietnams.

Thai Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman reported after the session that President Nixon has reaffirmed U.S. commitments to Thailand and pledged to supply it with equipment necessary to fight the Communists.

The pledge apparently came during a 2½-hour talk with Thai leaders on the future role of the U.S. in the defence and economic development of Thailand and other southeast Asian countries.

Thanat, who took part in the talks, told reporters both sides discussed how various countries in Asia, especially South Vietnam, could be helped to stand on their own feet and preserve their freedom.

Thanat said the talks were aimed at finding ways to bring peace to Vietnam, Laos and the rest of Southeast Asia.

He said they were held in a free and frank atmosphere. Thanat said troop withdrawals from South Vietnam and elsewhere were discussed and Nixon explained the reasons for U.S. policy. He said the question of U.S. troops in Thailand also was raised, but it was agreed not to take immediate action on this.

POSITION TENUOUS
He said both sides understood that the continued presence of 48,000 U.S. troops in Thailand depended on the situation in Southeast Asia.

Thanat explained that U.S. troops were in Thailand to put an early end to the war in Viet-

VIETNAM VISIT SET

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — President Nixon will make a brief visit to Vietnam from Bangkok before flying on to New Delhi Thursday, U.S. Ambassador Kenneth B. Keating said today.

Asked at a news conference whether the president would visit Vietnam, Keating said: "My information is that this is true."

nam and their presence has no direct bearing on the defence of Thailand.

He said Nixon was told Thailand has the responsibility for preserving its independence and freedom with its own capabilities but hoped its friends such as the U.S. would help by giving material assistance.

The U.S. agreed to help in developing Thailand's remote areas to strengthen them in the fight against Communists, he said. He added that the question of diplomatic recognition of China and its admission to the United Nations was not discussed in the talks.

Earlier, informed sources said Nixon — here on the third leg of his five-country Asian tour — ran into strong opposition over his decision to reduce American involvement in Asia during the talks with Thanom and Jesus Vargas, secretary-general of the Southeast Asian Treaty Organization.

The sources said Nixon was told the U.S. military presence

Sommers Loses, Storms Out

By Canadian Press

The political comeback trail for Robert Sommers ended Monday night when the former lands and forest minister led about 50 supporters out of a Social Credit nomination meeting in the Rossland-Trail riding before his name was even put forward.

The walkout followed a heated debate between Sommers supporters and George Driedger, chairman of the meeting and president of the British Columbia Social Credit League, and left the way clear for Education Minister Donald Brothers to secure the nomination by acclamation.

"I wanted an honest contest — I didn't get it," said Mr. Sommers, who claimed a ruling by Mr. Driedger left him with no voting supporters.

"If I'd lost this dispute, you would not have heard me cry."

NO CARDS
Mr. Driedger said the only persons eligible to vote were those with $5 membership cards — which most of the Sommers supporters didn't have.

The debate ended when a Sommers man suggested to the former cabinet minister that they leave the meeting in protest. Fifty of the 350 persons present followed them out the door.

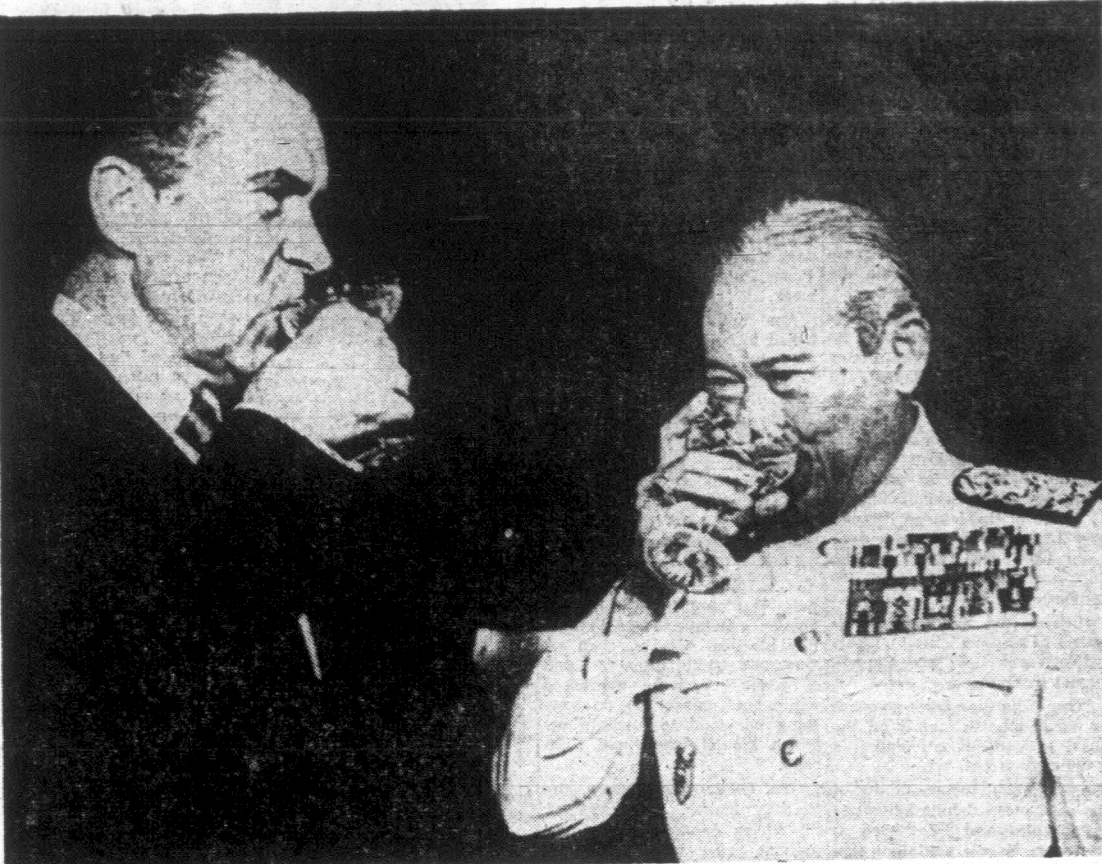

"I will not go to the courts," said Mr. Sommers. "I've had a lot of experience in court. They cost an awful lot of money and I haven't got it."

Mr. Brothers, who took over in Rossland-Trail after Mr. Sommers went to jail, did not mention his predecessor's aborted candidacy in his acceptance speech.

Land Prices Scuttling Low-Cost Housing Plan

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A unique low-income housing scheme in Saanich has ground to a halt, far short of its objective.

It has become the victim of rapidly-rising real estate prices and a failure by officials to realize how high the cost of houses would rise.

Its concept was hailed by many — instead of grouping low-income people into a single project, which would become a ghetto, it sought to disperse the poor into different neighborhoods and into individual houses.

Initiated by Saanich municipality, approved by provincial and federal authorities which supplied the $700,000 capital, the scheme was to comprise 50 houses. And that meant an average of $14,000 per house.

FOUR HOUSES

In the last 16 months, only 13 houses have been purchased with two more soon to go into the scheme. Since last December, only four houses — including the latest two which were moved from other locations — have been added.

The problem is that $14,000 houses, in Saanich and on a sewer line, are so rare that they can be said to be non-existent.

Ald. Edith Gunning, chairman of the municipal housing committee and sparkplug of the scheme, said permission was not received to exceed the $14,000 limit for each house set by provincial authorities.

"It doesn't seem likely we will be able to buy anything for that price," she said. "They were not willing to pay much more per unit than they would have to pay for multiple housing."

CONSTRUCTION

She said when sewer lots are created by the municipality's sewerage expansion, it may be possible to build triplexes and quadruplexes.

HEROIN MARKET PROGRAM TARGET

Heroin, because it creates an intolerable need in the user, also creates an ideal environment for a ruthless black market. If the need for heroin can be broken, so can the market.

At the British Columbia Narcotic Addiction Foundation in Vancouver an experimental program using the synthetic drug methadone is designed both to medically combat the effects of heroin and to break down the addict's reliance on illegal sources of the drug.

Saanich Tests Isolation Cell

By BOB MITCHELL

A time-out booth is a cubicle two feet wide, six feet long, about the height of a door, designed to isolate a problem child who proves uncontrollable for the teacher.

A motion to introduce one on an experimental basis in a class for emotionally disturbed children at McTavish Road Elementary, dived the Saanich school board Monday, but was finally approved on an experimental basis and on condition it be redesigned to make it more suitable for isolating a child.

As recommended by Victoria psychiatrist Dr. Phillip New, the time-out booth would have a one-way glass, so that a child enclosed in the box could be observed by student teachers and child-care workers.

VICTORIAN METHODS

Trustee Zachary Hamilton said the booth was a return to Victorian methods of treating misbehaving children.

"If a child is suffering from claustrophobia, using a booth with a one-way glass is a retrogression."

"I don't care how you do it, this is like locking a kid in a cupboard."

Hamilton said the booth reminded him of the days when his grandmother used to lock him under the stairs when he was a bad child.

Board chairman Mrs. Ruby-May Parrott said the time-out booth is the best solution for preventing a problem child from disturbing a class.

MORE EFFECTIVE

"Even with children with mental problems this is more effective than talking. The teacher has to have some way of isolating a particular problem."

Mr. Parrott said the booth is not unlike the penalty box reserved for rambunctious hockey players.

If you break the rules, you spend some time in the box. Superintendent Robert Price said the time-out booth had been rejected by the Greater Victoria school board, who had reservations about isolating a child.

But he pointed out the idea has been applied successfully in the United States, and added he would like to see the booth made wider than two feet.

"I don't like the two by six — we can make it bigger, we can make it open at the top and we can put in lighting."

PORT COQUITLAM (CP) — City council voted Monday to lay charges and seek an injunction against Canadian Pacific Railway over pollution of freight yards in the municipality.

Russians, Tough Markets Blamed In Steveston Fish Plant Shutdown

By PAT DUFOUR

Russian draggers, east coast subsidies and cheaper competition from Scandinavia and the Far East were blamed today for the closure of B.C. Packers Ltd.'s fillet processing plant at Steveston, near Richmond.

President Dick Nelson told the Times in a telephone interview that the three-year-old plant had had "a lot of money invested in it but it just didn't work out."

He said that the economic situation had forced the decision to close. The 250 employees in the plant would be transferred to a salmon cannery on the site.

He admitted that this employment would be seasonal, resulting in loss of jobs once the salmon runs end.

"We found it was taking much longer to get loads, making the operation highly uneconomic."

REDUCED CATCHES

Horner Stevens, secretary-treasurer of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, agreed that the Russian draggers had made huge inroads into the Canadian draggers' hauls.

"Some of their nets can scoop up 40 tons of fish at a time. This is another of many reasons why the fishing limits should be extended to include the continental shelf."

STEVENS
blames draggers

He added that the company wasn't giving all its reasons for ditching its fillet processing plant.

EASTERN EMPHASIS

Stevens accused the company of making its closure decision in order to lay more emphasis on its operations on the east coast where federal subsidies are given to help build up trawling fleets and processing plants.

"B.C. Packers began to expand into east coast operations when George Weston became the major shareholder two years ago."

"Weston owns a lot of the fishing operation on the east coast, including Connors Bros. in the Bay of Fundy, one of the

B.C. Tel Talks Enter 5th Day

A marathon bargaining session Monday in the five-week-old B.C. Telephone strike ended at 1:30 a.m. today and negotiators were back in the conference room this morning for their fifth day of talks.

Douglas Fir Overcut Says Study

Overcutting will continue to cause a decrease in the annual cuts of the Douglas fir, a B.C. labor department study predicts.

Coupled with growing demands for B.C. lumber, the decline of this "high-value species" is forcing the forest industry to make larger cuts of the smaller, lower-quality balsam, hemlock and spruce trees.

The research branch report also notes that greater use of the smaller logs will pose adjustment in problems in production.

At the same time, productivity in the B.C. woods is expected to increase by about 10 cubic feet per hour to 44 feet in the next six years, while the labor force remains static.

However, fewer workers will be used in the woods as more sophisticated equipment is put into use.

Demand for lumber from B.C. woods will continue to rise, the study found, predicting a 22 per cent increase in harvest by 1975.

There also will be expansion of the plywood and veneer industry on the coast, even more in the interior.

But the report expects pulp production to decline on the coast by about 20 per cent to 65 per cent of the provincial total, which will be substantially greater by 1975.

Peking Leader Dead

TOKYO (AP) — Hsieh Nan-kang, member of the standing committee of the Chinese Communist party, died in Peking Saturday, Peking radio reported today.

He was 68. The radio said Hsieh, a native of Formosa, served Nationalist China's military delegation in Japan before he "defected" to mainland China in 1951.

SOMMERS LOSES

Later in an interview, he said he didn't believe Mr. Sommers would run as an independent and "even if he did, he would have a minimal effect."

BERGER HIT
Earlier Ray Williston, the present lands and forests minister, lashed out at New Democratic Party leader Tom Berger who criticized the government's stand on pollution.

Mr. Berger had said the government had failed to enforce anti-pollution legislation that had been law for 13 years.

Mr. Williston said Monday that it did not matter how many anti-pollution laws were on the books until people became interested in backing the government on its stand.

TAXES WRONG
In Penitence, Mr. Berger said Monday that property taxes should pay for property services, "not people services."

He told a news conference that the costs of services for people should come out of general revenue and not be borne by local taxpayers.

In Merritt, Liberal leader Pat McGee said Monday night unveiled a scheme for industrial development which he said would see secondary industries established throughout the province.

Dr. McGee said the program would work under a capital grants system offering up to one-third the cost of new plant construction and added that government financing would be available in certain cases.

Meanwhile, the Social Credit slate added some offense to their selection team Monday night when Annis Stukus, a former kicker and quarterback in the Canadian Football League, was nominated in the North Vancouver-Seymour riding.

Mr. Stukus, 54, now sports director of radio station CKVN in Vancouver, also coached the B.C. Lions and Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference.

Representatives of the striking Federation of Telephone Workers and B.C. Tel met federal conciliator D. S. Tysoe for more than 12 hours with neither side indicating what progress has been made.

Talks resumed Friday at the urging of Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey after more than a month of stalemate. The federation began its strike June 23 in support of a 32 per cent wage increase, and the company has since carried on its communications services with management, supervisory and summer relief personnel.

PRODUCTIVE
Hugh Gow, chairman of the Victoria area strike committee, said Monday that negotiations to that point had been productive.

Both sides have agreed to Tysoe's request to make no comment on the negotiations until meaningful agreement has been reached.

Gow said a second $25 distribution would be made Friday to federation members qualifying for strike benefits.

About 230 of the local's 300 members may receive strike pay, provided they have done picket duty or other jobs in support of the strike, and have not benefited by outside employment.

HOLIDAY PAY
Gow cleared up a question of annual vacations which fall within the strike period: Employees will receive any holiday pay they would normally be entitled to, since this would be for service completed in the previous 12 months.

But whether holiday time occurring during the strike would be rescheduled after the strike is negotiable.

Papal Guard Deserts

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — One of Pope Paul's Swiss bodyguards has deserted — probably the first to do so since the guard was formed by Pope Julius II in 1505, a guard officer announced today.

The guard, Kaspar Holzgang, disappeared without a trace last month from the 100-member army.

Nelson admitted that B.C. Packers had invested in a cannery in Newfoundland but pointed out that "several have gone broke there."

He said his company had no plans for closing down its plant at Ogden Point which is used for cold storage and the freezing of salmon and halibut.

G.I. Charged In Shooting
DA NANG (AP) — A 28-year-old United States marine sergeant has been charged with murder in the fatal shooting of an Australian girl singer, marine spokesmen said today.

Sgt. James W. Killen of Birmingham, Ala., was charged Monday with the fatal shooting of Katherine Ann Barnes, 20, Miss Barnes was shot through the heart July 20 as she was finishing a performance with six other entertainers at a marine non-commissioned officers' club five miles southwest of Da Nang.

Pope Paul is officially visiting Africa to honor 22 Ugandan martyrs who died in the 19th century. He also will address the closing session of the first all-Africa conference of Roman Catholic bishops the day he arrives.

Ojukwu said in his plea for a truce that "the government and people of Biafra join all men of goodwill in Africa to welcome and wish the Pope well on his coming visit to Africa."

DUE IN UGANDA
Observers in Kampala also noted that the presidents of two African countries that have recognized Biafra, Julius Nyerere of Tanzania and Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia, are due in Uganda Wednesday.

'AFRICAN' MUSIC COOLS OFFICIALS

Rock Concerts Drummed Out

Victoria Mayor Hugh Stephen said today outdoor rock concerts will probably be prohibited in residential or downtown area in future.

Ald. Cecil Parrott said if they are to be held at all they should be held inside an arena and during the afternoon. The mayor said Friday's rock concert—three bands and an audience of nearly 2,000 in Royal Athletic Park—had taught council a couple of things:

Rock music is noisy and most people don't like it."

And, "things young people like do conflict violently with older people's tastes. The result is friction."

At least 40 people phoned police to complain about the music Friday night. Some lived as far away as Oak Bay and Gonzales Point.

"I hate the music myself, but all young people seem to like it," said Stephen.

So they can have an outlet and some fun without disturbing too many older people, future concerts should be "in isolated areas." The mayor suggested Elk or Beaver Lakes where "they could make their noise to their hearts' content."

Except for the noise and one band member who "contemptuously disobeyed orders and urged young people to sit on the grass," the crowd was controlled.

The mayor said there was little doubt but "when you get 2,000 young people out and that music gets them stirred up you are never quite sure where it's going to end."

Stephen outlined the municipal politician's dilemma in things like the rock concert. You don't want to appear an ogre and against fun, he said, but at the same time you don't want a riot or hundreds of angry taxpayers on your hands.

Deputy Police Chief Ray Maitland said except for one incident — and of course the noise — everything was orderly.

"But I guess the African music works them up to a frenzy," he said. "Some of them got all worked up and started ripping down a fence." Ald. Parrott feels he is being made to look like an ogre and denied today having given the order to stop the music.

Parrott said he has received insulting calls from young people calling him an ogre but has received even more calls of support from people offended by the noise.

Parrott emphasized that neither he nor council is against young people but stated he opposes too much noise.

"We had no idea what kind of noise this was going to make," he said.

Radar Technician Oak Bay NDP Choice

Twenty-eight-year-old radar technician Jack McKenzie was nominated to run for the New Democratic party in Oak Bay Monday.

"We can increase the number of NDP votes," he said.

Increasing the NDP votes is admitted as the only goal of the New Democrats in traditionally Liberal Oak Bay.

While party campaigners insist winds of political change are blowing across provincial ridings this year, they see barely a hint of a breeze in Oak Bay.

McKenzie says his chances of winning the vote are less than slim.

UP THE TRACK

In the July, 1968 provincial byelection in Oak Bay, Liberal Allan Cox led the way with 7,877 votes, Social Credit candidate Peter Pollen was runnerup with 4,671 votes and Myra Yarwood, NDP standard bearer, finished up the track with 553 votes.

Cox will be nominated again tonight. The Soared challenger this time is Oak Bay alderman Dr. F. Scott Wallace.

A combined campaign for Oak Bay and Victoria is being waged by the NDP and they make no secret that it is concentrated on toppling the two Soared cabinet ministers in Victoria ridings.

To do so NDP candidates Peter Bunn and Philip Fawcett will have to defeat Public Works Minister W. N. Chant and Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce Minister Waldo Skillings.

Of the $8,000 budgeted for the dual campaign, $6,000 will go toward the fight in Victoria.

McKenzie is taking his first political campaign seriously and will work full-time on door-to-door canvassing in Oak Bay.

He won the nomination in a two-way contest with retired

United Church minister Harold Allen, a veteran NDP-OCF campaigner.

City Broke Deal, Says Promoter

Rock concert promoter Paul Watson, 23, said there was nothing in a contract he had with the city that required his Friday night show to end at 11 p.m.

And he said the contract made no reference to playing off the grass at Royal Athletic park.

Watson was criticized for not ending the concert at 11 p.m. The contract stated, however, that Watson had use of Royal Athletic park until 11:30 p.m. City officials cut it off at 11:25 p.m. Friday.

Watson said if anybody broke the contract it was the city. The contract called for city provision of electricity for the bands until 11:30 p.m. City officials cut it off at 11:25 p.m. Friday.

As for the turf in the park, Watson said he made an agreement with one city official that, if the stands became too crowded, spectators could sit on the grass.

Ald. Cecil M. Parrott and Mayor Hugh Stephen said Watson was told that no one was to walk on the newly-seeded area.

Watson, a University of Victoria student who lives at 3127 Rutledge, said he will organize another rock concert for this winter.

"But this time it will be inside."

Hemorrhage Puts Waldo Back in Bed

Waldo Skillings is back in Royal Jubilee hospital with a recurrence of internal hemorrhaging after a fall he took at the Union Club July 5.

Jubilee administrator Dr. A. C. Pickles said today the Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce minister is in "very satisfactory" condition.

"He probably will have to remain under observation at the hospital for another seven to 10 days," said Pickles.

Skillings was released from hospital Tuesday and readmitted early Saturday when the hemorrhaging began. He left the hospital July 15 to attend his nomination meeting where he was again chosen to contest the Aug. 27 election in Victoria riding.

Grit Lawyer Seeks Saanich Nomination

Oak Bay lawyer Louis Lindholm is among several Liberals planning to contest the nomination for Saanich and the Islands riding.

The nomination meeting for Saanich Thursday at Royal Oak Elementary school is one of four Liberal nomination meetings in the Greater Victoria area this week.

Along with Lindholm there are "two or three others" expected to seek the nomination said Patrick Palmer, president of the Esquimalt-Saanich federal Liberal association.

Palmer said some of these candidates may announce their intention at tonight's Oak Bay riding Liberal nomination meeting at the Oak Bay municipal hall at 8 p.m.

Allan Cox, who won the Oak Bay seat in a 1968 byelection, is expected to be unopposed at tonight's nominating meeting.

In Esquimalt riding there are two candidates, Fred Boulter, 808 Brock, and Frederick H. Phillips, 309 Sabina. Phillips, credit union manager for CFB and Esquimalt, announced his candidacy at a coffee party Monday.

The Esquimalt riding nomination will be held Wednesday at Fraser Street Hall.

Mystery still surrounds the Liberal hopefuls in Victoria riding.

The Victoria riding association will choose two candidates Friday at The Inn, 1528 Cook.

Buildup Foreseen For Esquimalt Base

Alberta Cutbacks May Benefit Here

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Defence department cuts are not expected to affect bases in Greater Victoria, sources close to the government said today.

It has been suggested in Esquimalt will likely be that army and navy bases reinforced.

Major bases in Calgary and Lethbridge are likely to get "the deep six." The benefit of cutbacks there could be felt here.

The Times was told, "The situation is not cutting down at Esquimalt, but consideration for expanding its role."

The civil service—federal, provincial and local—plus the military is the most important basic industry in Greater Victoria, a local economic report said last week.

Military and civilian personnel in this area account for 48 per cent of employment, although there has been a decline since 1961. The federal section accounts for 14.5 per cent of the 48 per cent.

The report said, however, that there is no evidence the federal government will substantially increase its civilian or military labor force locally.

The military labor force has declined from 6,217 in 1961 to 4,702 in 1967, reflecting the decline in the size of armed forces in Canada.

Defence Payrolls Up Slightly

Despite the decline in military and civilian employees in the defence area, the total value of defence payrolls has increased slightly in the same period.

The military bases include the Work Point barracks and the west coast navy base as well as the dockyard.

Eighteen months ago, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux said the long-time army base would be phased out.

But one source said today it has since become obvious that the minister "spoke out of turn."

In Ottawa, informed sources said the closure of several defence department bases—to be announced within two weeks — will be staggered over a period of years.

In this way, the economic impact of the closures is expected to be eased.

Reports that up to 15 bases in Canada will get the chop were discounted last week by Cadieux as an exaggeration. It was understood that about half that number would be closer to the truth.

In addition, however, a number of bases will be cut down in size. The closures and reductions are part of a government program to keep defence expenditures at the current level of $1.8 billion for the next three years.

Thieves Ransack Tourists' Cars

Blankets, clothing, cameras and a complete set of automotive tools worth $200 overflew four cardboard boxes at police headquarters today.

Police recovered them after more than $2,000 worth of goods were stolen from six tourists' cars visiting the city from California, Calgary and Surrey. They were parked at the same motel.

Two men were to appear in central court later today in connection with the thefts.

Two men were arrested before 2 a.m. today after a patrol car pulled their car over for driving without headlights.

Police said the stolen goods were spotted in the rear of the vehicle.

Detectives today were checking the articles for ownership and value.

Police are also searching to see if other cars were entered in the area of the motel which they refused to identify.

Ask the Times

Q. Where did Garry Oaks originate and where else do they grow?

A. Garry oaks are native to this coast and grow only on Vancouver Island with one or two patches along the Fraser River. They are small trees with twisted trunks and grow on cliff-like areas.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times," Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

MOTHERS BAND TO GIVE MILK

A group of Victoria mothers who support breast feeding of babies have helped a sick baby in Vancouver with an intolerance to cows' milk.

They are members of La Leche League—the name means milk in Spanish. It is a world-wide organization which believes in "good mothering through breast feeding."

The three-month-old Vancouver boy had been breast fed, but his mother stopped. A severe skin condition then developed.

Nine mothers in Vancouver, members of the La Leche League chapter there, contributed milk for the baby but this was not enough.

A call for help went out to Victoria league members who sent over 30 ounces, or one day's supply, at the weekend.

Asked if there will be further donations from Victoria mothers, local La Leche League chapter leader Mrs. Tom Rowbottom said "if they ask we will be ready."

We're Cleaning Our Own Nest Says BCFP

Southern Vancouver Island's largest industrial employer today listed the 11 steps already taken to hold air, water and noise pollution to a minimum.

B.C. Forests Products, with an annual payroll in excess of $26 million, (tourist income in the area is estimated at around $10 million) and employing 2,900 workers, admitted "perhaps what we haven't done is to properly inform the public in Victoria as to what has and what is being accomplished."

The statement was contained in a letter to Ald. Cecil Parrott who had requested full details of the total B.C. Forest Products anti-pollution program.

The company lists five steps in an air pollution control program ranging from the hiring of smoke control consultants to closed circuit television cameras.

NEW EQUIPMENT
The consultant, B. H. Leviston and Associates, is investigating new equipment and processes to reduce smoke.

The television camera keeps an eye on smoke stacks to ensure that the company operates within the City of Victoria smoke bylaw.

A claim that "almost half of what one sees coming from the stacks is water vapor" is repeated.

Company officials told Parrott

that research to find new economic ways of using lower-grade waste material is continuing.

"Hemlock sawdust is now going to our pulp mill at Crofton, wet bark is being used to cover garbage at the Hartland Road dump and fir bark is being mixed with seaweed to produce a fertilizer by an independent company in Victoria," the report states.

Four methods of water pollution control are listed by the company: log booms to control floating debris; the removal of debris; a continuing harbor clean-up program; and installation of a $250,000 dry barker to eliminate discharge of foam and discolored water.

LESS NOISE

To minimize noise near large mills the company says mufflers have been added to air cylinder exhausts, signal lights and electric buzzers have replaced air horns and buildings have been closed in.

Parrott said although much remained to be done, he is satisfied the company is making a strenuous effort to eliminate pollution.

The company operates plants at Victoria, Crofton and Youbou and logging operations at Cay-cuse, Port renfrew, Koksilah, Sooke and Muir Creek on the west coast.

Arthur Mayse...

NOT SO MANY YEARS ago, the typical high school student turned loose for the summer was content to make do on an allowance from his or her parents. But John Atcheson of Canada Manpower has found that the present teen-age crop is better blessed with initiative, and much more anxious to make a buck.

A federal employment service Youth Squad of carefully-selected high school students is helping it do so by bringing job and young applicant together.

July employment figures won't be on hand until early next month and even when available, they will tell only part of the story. This is because much of the work that the kids do, is not the payroll variety.

But in the way of casual employment, manpower public relations officer and secretariat Atcheson tells me, you name it and the chances are that you'll find them working at it.

The Youth Squad, for which one student was chosen from each high school, has steered its peers to tree-felling, lawn-cutting and baby-sitting jobs. You'll find others picking berries these warm days, although that work source isn't expected to last much longer.

It's very hard for younger students to find regular employment. However, some high school seniors, either through Youth Squad liaison or on their own push, are spending the tourist season as bus boys, chambermaids and waitresses.

Car washing and service station chores give still others a chance to earn those eagerly-sought dollars.

In total, says John Atcheson, the employment picture is much the same as last year's where high-schoolers are concerned. And as usual, Victoria's "retirement industry" provides a good deal of the casual employment available for the sub-university bunch.

The university student, whose summer break begins almost two months earlier and lasts longer, is more likely to get a better break from the outfit with a season's work to bestow.

But the real rub comes later, when young men and women set out to look for full-time employment in a home area that is heavy on charm but light on industry.

Some find their niche here. But the off-island drain continues year by year.

LETTER HERE FROM

"Mrs. G. S.", who was surprised no long time ago to find that her Medical Services Association package fails to provide for routine checkups.

"I always believed the their thinking rather odd, to say the least."

The lady encloses the reply she got from MSA's Vancouver headquarters. Here's one of its two sentences... but better take a long breath before reading:

"While people generally, medical doctors in particular, see the advantages of and recommend periodic checkups and a wide range of preventative medicine, nevertheless we understand that world economy and even the economy of our affluent society cannot yet afford utopia in health matters, realizing that this medical utopia would rapidly exhaust the medical manpower available and realizing as well that people generally would not be willing to pay the increased premium necessary to finance the operation."

Content aside — and I don't think much of that — the above is an excellent sample of marathon officialese.

Seventy-six words, I make it, from start to period!

VICTORIA RECREATION committee member Mike Griffin has lambasted the promoters of last Friday's rock concert for contract-breaking. But no official word has yet been spoken about the disgraceful episode that ended the electronic jamboree.

I refer to the blackening of Athletic Park that left an estimated 2,000 young people to stumble and grope their way to the exits.

To call the stunt arbitrary and fat-headed isn't enough. It was a highly dangerous expedient, and it could all too easily have brought serious injury or even death to some of those concert-goers.

It could also have placed the city in a most unenviable position when the damage claims began to tumble in.

I think that Victoria City Council would do well to investigate that dousing of the lights — not excluding Ald. Cecil M. Parrott's reported part in the affair — and deliver stern censure where due.

Fan Frees Hallway Of Summer Swelter

By PENNY SAVER

"Could you put your finger on that knot?" asked Jayne.

I did as she requested and promptly had my finger squished by the wrapping ribbon, pulled tight by her enthusiastic knotting techniques.

"Sorry about that," she murmured as I wiggled my finger free. "Now all I have to do is add the bow and it will be finished."

"Wad ish ik?" I asked through a mouthful of throbbing index finger.

"An unbirthday present for my husband," she replied. "He has been complaining like mad about the lack of air conditioning in his office, so I brought him a little desk fan." She found the little fan when she went searching for a large one to encourage circulation in the central sections of their house, namely the hall which, by some trick of fate, is completely divorced from any air currents in the rooms themselves.

On hot days the hall just sat and sweltered, a long thin Black Hole of Calcutta between the kitchen and the bedroom.

The fans Jayne found ranged from $8.95 for the small desk model she bought her husband to $24.95 for a monster with blue blades and a white plastic guard. There was a medium-sized model in the same style for $17.95.

The little fan sits on a chrome stand and has a chrome guard around the blades. It is nine inches tall at the most.

Variety of Funnels

The larger fans are good for having around children because the plastic guard is very close-set. Jayne and I were trying to figure out whether the fan was all plastic or whether the blades were enameled metal, and we had a terrible time trying to inch something through to tap the blades.

When I went back to Jayne's to see how her husband liked his gift, both were in the back yard bending over a can of lawn mower fuel with concerned expressions.

"What's the problem?" I asked. "Grass," replied Jayne. "Somehow a great clump of grass has got inside the can of gas and we are trying to decide what to do."

They eventually got a monster funnel and strained the grass out of the gas.

The funnel they used costs $2.45 and is made of blue plastic. It comes with three circular filters of different fineness and is close to a foot in diameter and over six inches deep.

"Funnels," commented Jayne as the lawn mower coughed its acceptance of the filtered fuel, "come in an amazing variety of shapes and sizes. That one is recommended for farms and industries filling airplane engines and stuff."

"But funnels in general begin at 12 cents for a little plastic one that is even a bit small for filling jam jars. 'Funny thing is, I hardly ever use funnels myself — which probably explains why I spend half my day wiping up.'"

Government Insincere Says Indian Activist

TORONTO (CP) — Delia Opekokew is a Canadian Indian who believes that her people can lift themselves up by their bootstraps.

She is proud of her people and of their rich heritage. But more than that, she is moved to action — striving to better the lot of the Indian in Canada, not through words alone but through deeds as well.

Twenty-three years old, Delia is an Indian of the Canoe Lake reserve in Saskatchewan, and a former communications worker with the All-Indian Federation of Saskatchewan. Now she is organizing secretary for the Ontario native development fund, a branch of the Indian-Eskimo Association.

"As Indians," says Delia, "we are asking for the right to work with our own people, to have control over some of our own affairs."

"The people working on the Indian situation are not Indians, yet the Indians know the conditions of their people and feel they can improve conditions faster. Governments are so technical they sometimes can't feel."

Delia took an active part in the May 20 Queen's Park protest against Ontario's social and family services minister, John Yaremko, hoping to make the government begin to "feel."

Like the staff of this department who resigned in protest against government inactivity, Delia says the government appears "insincere" in its efforts to help the Indian.

For Delia, statistics supplied by the National Indian Brotherhood about the plight of the Canadian Indian tell a bitter tale. Nearly half of all Indian families earn a yearly income of $1,000, or one-fifth the national average.

More than 40 per cent of Indian families need relief each year, or 10 times the national average. The preschool mortality rate for Indian children also has been estimated at 10 times the national average.

"The Indian is isolated from the mainstream of social and academic life, and has been forced to live on one area of land like an animal in a cage," says Delia.

Also acting as hosts were Victoria nurses Alys Cockin, Miriam Hafer, Bev Laitinen, Betty Leech, Dorothy Moore, Phyllis-Anne Nelson and Lorna Setter. Special guests were Margaret Nelson, Lorraine Edwards and Sheila McQueen. The reunion began Friday evening with a cocktail party and ended with a family picnic Sunday.

DEAR ABBY...

Not Hereditary

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My best friend and her husband have two adopted children, a boy and a girl. The little girl is nearly five, and she is a very affectionate child who likes to hug, kiss and climb all over the men who visit in the home.

The mother expressed great concern over this, and confided, "I know what her real mother was like, and that's what worries me." (The implication being that because most adopted children are products of unwed mothers, they will turn out "bad" like their mothers.) I am sure that many people feel that this is true, but I, for one, do not believe it.

I feel so strongly about this, Abby, because I happen to be adopted, although few of my friends are aware of it. I would like to see this letter printed with your comments. Thank you—Adopted and Hurt.

DEAR ADOPTED: The causes of illegitimacy are not hereditary. Your friend is unbelievably ignorant, and I hope someone educates her before she communicates her foolish fears to her adopted children.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl. I am pretty and smart, have a good figure and a nice complexion, and people tell me I have a good personality.

My friend is fat, has a pimply complexion and a terrible personality, but she gets all the boys. Can you help me?—Not Popular.

DEAR NOT: No, but I'll bet your fat friend with the pimply complexion and terrible personality can. Watch her and listen to her and find out why the boys find her so attractive. She may not be so great, but if she makes other people think they're great, she'll win a popularity contest.

DEAR ABBY: This isn't just an ordinary mother-in-law gripe. I really do love my mother-in-law, but she does something that grieves me.

Whenever I have something new on, she wants to know where I bought it, how much it costs, and would I mind terribly if she got one like it since "we don't go around in the same crowd"? (It's true, we don't go around in the same crowd, but we both go to a lot of the same places, and we know a lot of the same people.)

Abby, she's a darling woman, and we're the same size, and can wear the same styles, but what can I do? Of course I tell her I don't mind, but I don't enjoy going somewhere dressed like one of the Bobbsey twins. So what do you suggest?—One of a kind.

DEAR ONE: I suggest you either level with her—and quit telling her you don't mind when you do mind, or else continue as you are and suffer the consequences.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Crab Louis Sparkles

Among the dishes for which the West is famous is a crab salad said to have first been served in a San Francisco restaurant around 1911. It is known as Crab Louis.

Crab Louis is distinguished by a delicately flavored dressing. In essence, the dish consists of cooked crab meat mounded on lettuce, garnished with wedges or slices of tomato and hard-cooked egg, and accompanied by the Louis dressing.

Westerners make this salad with the Dungeness crab of the Pacific but it is an ideal salad to point up the distinctive good flavor of any variety of crab. For a new taste experience, try making it with Atlantic queen crab.

The home economists of the federal department of fisheries and forestry offer two kitchen-tested recipes. The first makes the standard version and the second a delicious new variation in which the crab instead of being served with the dressing is molded in it. An excellent make-ahead dish for party luncheon or buffet supper, the latter has all the good flavor of the original. Guests will enjoy its velvety texture and rich, cool smoothness.

CRAB LOUIS

One pound queen crab meat or other crab meat, fresh or frozen; 2 heads iceberg lettuce; 4 tomatoes; 4 hard-cooked eggs.

Louis Dressing: 1 cup mayonnaise; ¼ cup chili sauce; ¼ cup finely chopped green onions; ¼ cup finely chopped green pepper; ¼ cup heavy cream, whipped.

Thaw frozen crab meat. Drain. Examine carefully and remove any remaining shell or cartilage. Cut crab meat into bite-size chunks.

Cover four individual salad plates with the outer lettuce leaves. Shred the hearts and place a bed of shredded lettuce in the centre of each plate. Top with chunks of crabmeat. Cut tomatoes into wedges and eggs lengthwise into quarters. Circle crab mounds with tomato and egg wedges.

To make dressing, combine mayonnaise, chili sauce, green

cup mold or individual molds. Chill for about three hours, or until set. Unmold on serving platter. Garnish with lettuce and tomato wedges. Makes six servings.

MOLDED CRAB LOUIS

One pound queen crab meat or other crab meat, fresh or frozen; 2 envelopes unflavored gelatin; 1 cup water; 1 cup mayonnaise; 2 tbsps. lemon juice; ¼ cup chili sauce; ¼ tsp. salt; ¼ cup finely chopped green onions, including the tops; ¼ cup finely chopped green pepper; 2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped; ½ cup heavy cream, whipped; lettuce; tomato wedges.

Thaw frozen crab meat; drain. Remove any remaining shell or cartilage. Cut meat into bite-size chunks. Soften gelatin in water. Set over simmering water or low direct heat to dissolve. Blend in mayonnaise, lemon juice, chili sauce and salt.

Refrigerate until thickened to the consistency of unbeaten egg white, stirring occasionally. Combine green onion, green pepper, eggs and crab. When gelatin mixture is slightly thickened, add crab mixture and gently fold in the whipped cream.

Turn into a greased, five-
